

Henredon Classics

live the contemporary life with ease

Henredon Classics have been created to help you solve the decorating problems you face today. By staff designer, Kenneth R. Volz, this furniture reflects the elegance of ancient Greek and Roman architecture...scaled for today's homes and apartments.

Chests and buffets come in various sizes to fit anywhere in your room. Buffet shelves adjust to fit anything from speakers to sauceboats. Dining tables are compact when closed; open to seat a partyful.

Selected cherry and mahogany are hand-rubbed to a deep warm fruitwood finish that welcomes blending with other furniture. You will find that certain Henredon Classic designs are also available in Dover, a soft antiqued white.

These thoughtful dressers and chests (upper left) come with convenient, sliding, trinket trays. Choose bed in single, double, queen, or dual sizes.

Cane back and arms (lower left) make this a handsome sofa from all angles. You may order it 94" or 60" long (loveseat) in a variety of finishes—in any fabric from regal damask to brisk chintz.

You could create (above) a quiet niche for relaxation in your bedroom with this loveseat...or pair two in your living room. The dressing chest has generous and varied storage space.

Start this dining group (below) in your dining area; move it later to a formal dining room. The table, a 60" by 40" oval, extends to 108". You may order the buffet in wood or Macedonian Marble top. For booklets showing this entire collection and other distinctive Henredon living room, dining room and bedroom furniture—as well as the name of your nearest dealer—send 50 cents to Henredon, Dept. OCTOBER 1961

On the cover:

The rewards of broadening the scope of a living room to provide for more than one activity are clearly evident in the living room of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Bren (she is actress Claire Trevor) in Newport Beach, Calif. The whole sweep of space is divided by furniture to create the feeling of two separate rooms. At this end is an intimate arrangement in front of the fire for reading or listening to music played on hi-fi equipment installed behind folding doors. This corner also doubles for cocktails served from small bar behind other folding doors. At the opposite end of the room, the ceiling soars to a lofty height. The walls are hung with a profusion of paintings that give the effect of an artist's studio, and plenty of deep-cushioned furniture makes it comfortable for large parties. How to be sure you get the full natural beauty of wood when you select paneling

If the paneling's beauty wasn't grown by a tree, then it just isn't real wood paneling. But the tree is only the beginning...

No tree is exactly like another tree. Rain, sun, the seasons and the winds make every tree—and every piece of wood from every tree—individual.

That is why a room paneled in fine woods has such a special personality, a subtle freedom from exact repetition that is deeply satisfying to live with.

No synthetic material man has invented ever achieves this character. Even the clever photographs of wood grain, because they are printed over and over, always echo the same thing and thus become mechanical.

And there is another difference. Polished wood, real wood, glows. Literally, because wood fibers are semi-translucent. Some light always filters below the surface and glows back through. Thus there is an indefinable sense of depth in even the hardest grains—oak, mahogany, birch—a warmth and a hint of an extra dimension. Perhaps that is why there is always the temptation to run your hand over beautifully finished wood.

Weldwood finishers take 18 separate steps to give paneling this unique reflected-light glow with a genuine lacquer finish—the kind you find on only the finest furniture. Though lacquer is more expensive for the manufacturer it does not mask light like "economy" finishes. Nor does it dull luster like the thick coats employed in the commonly-used varnish method. Also, lacquer does not "yellow" with age or get sticky in humid weather as varnish may do.

It is probable that most wood panel walls are chosen because modern lives need relief from the chilly precision of machine-made things. Or because the living warmth of fine wood is expressed in such a marvelous profusion of tones, textures, and grain patterns that any architectural mood can be beautifully expressed. The range in Weldwood panels is extraordinary. Nothing says "home" like the sheen of firelight on nut-brown walnut . . . or is as coolly contemporary as the muted pencil-stripe of teak.

But fine wood paneling could be chosen solely because it is so easy to maintain and repair, if necessary. Painted walls must be repainted, papered walls must be repapered periodically. Wood needs only a little wax now and then—and it's always there, a permanent enhancement to the value and the character of your home.

People who work with wood—carpenters, wood-carvers, furniture craftsmen—develop a very special feeling about it. They feel this most ancient and eternally modern of shelter materials has a personality. Each piece.

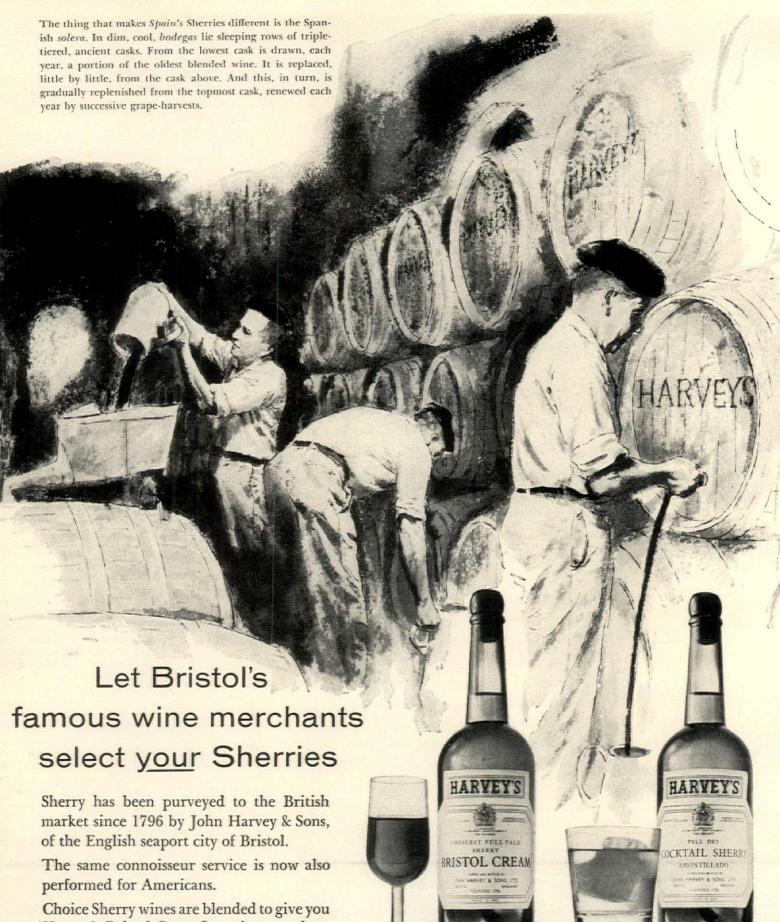

Because each piece grew itself and reports the record of the winters' storms and the summers' geniality. No machine could ever make anything so individual—or so beautiful.

You can see Weldwood paneling in a wide variety of finishes at your Weldwood lumber dealer's. Or visit the United States Plywood showroom nearest you. If you live in Canada, you'll find it listed under Weldwood Plywood, Ltd. There are 144 showrooms in all. One of them is near you.

The ENCYCLOPEDIA OF WORLD ART is the joint enterprise of the Institute for Cultural Collaboration of Rome and the McGraw-Hill Book Company of New York. The Institute is an organization established for the specific purpose of publishing major reference works requiring international planning and contributions.

Supporting the Institute are the Giorgio Cini Foundation of Venice and the famous Florentine publishers, G. C. Sansoni, who are responsible for the printing. McGraw-Hill Book Company is publishing the English language edition in New York, Toronto and London.

Notwithstanding these great resources, it is a physical impossibility to produce all fifteen volumes of this lavish Encyclopedia in one printing. The first four of these volumes are delivered initially; the balance are to be issued one at a time, at the rate of three a year. You may therefore easily budget your purchase in small payments extending over the full period required to complete the set.

Charter Subscriber's Privileges

By subscribing now, you will be protected against price increases as the 15-volume set progresses toward completion. Further, when all sets are distributed, the Encyclopedia is almost certain to command a premium price.

Also, by subscribing now and thus actively participating in the ultimate realization of a truly inspiring international enterprise, you will in effect be fulfilling the role of a twentieth-century patron of the arts.

Not many Americans will have the privilege of possessing this superb work. As a member of such a unique group, you will own what in a few years may well be a most sought-after collector's item. Fewer than 2,000 sets of the first printing are still available in the United States. Subscriptions have been received from libraries, schools, universities, art institutions, etc. The extraordinary reception by reviewers, collectors, art critics, as well as subscribers, indicates that reservations may soon account for the remaining sets.

Why do more dishwasher owners use Cascade than any other product?

Because Cascade eliminates drops that dry into spots!

WATER DROPS See what happens when plain water is sprayed on glassware, silver. This test shows how drops form. These dry into ugly spots.

CASCADE But see with Cascade no drops form! Just as in your dishwasher, water slides off in clear-rinsing "sheets." Dishes, silver dry spotless, sparkling.

Cascade gives you visibly cleaner dishes, visibly brighter silver. You'll discover Cascade does a superior job of stopping spots (your toughest problem in automatic dishwashing). That's because Cascade contains Chlorosheen . . . an exclusive formula that eliminates the drops that cause spots. No drops left to hold grease and food particles or dry into cloudy streaks or messy spots. No wonder more dishwasher owners use Cascade than any other product.

No other dishwasher detergent cleans so well yet is so safe for fine china patterns! Only Cascade is rated safe for today's loveliest china patterns by the American Fine China Guild, whose members make Castleton, Flintridge, Franciscan, Lenox and Syracuse china. Their exclusive recommendation was given Cascade after thoroughly testing every leading dishwasher detergent. Look for their seal of approval on every Cascade package.

Going places, finding things in SPAIN, THE LAND OF FIESTAS

BY THOMAS KERNAN

The colorful pageantry of age-old religious and folk celebrations can be the high point of a Spanish holiday any time of year

Editor's Note: The Americanborn editor of H&G's French counterpart, Maison & Jardin, reports on the spectacles he found most fascinating during his own holidays in Spain.

The Spanish word for holiday by now sounds as if it had always belonged to the American language. Few of us would use the French word fête in conversation and no one would ever think of the German Feiertag. But everybody knows fiesta. Probably, the word crept north to the United States from Mexico, where fiestas have some importance; but back in Spain, the mother-country, the calendar is studded with a succession of feast days that permit Castilians, Andalusians and Catalans to emerge from behind their closed doors and release emotions suppressed by a silent and frequently hard way of life. One festival is quite different from the other, because the Spanish provinces and even the counties have retained a great deal of individuality. The events are frequently based on local traditions that go back hundreds and sometimes a thousand years.

There are fiestas large and small at most seasons of the year and in each region. If you can schedule your trip to Spain in the spring or early summer, however, you will be in time for the cream of the Spanish festivals—and the traveler who can arrange to spend Easter in Spain is lucky indeed.

Easter on the Costa Brava

Much has been written about Easter Week in Seville, but it has, in fact, become so touristic that I don't feel it is any longer the best possible spot for an Easter holiday in Spain. Along the Costa Brava, however, many Easter Week celebrations are unspoiled.

Pandemonium in Pamplona (opposite): Early every morning for a week—the week of the Fiesta of San Fermin the bulls of the corrida are stampeded through the streets, preceded by those of the town's gay blades who have the nerve—and energy—to indulge in this wildly dangerous race

The Costa Brava is the shore of the Mediterranean just south of the French border, in a region so hilly that the historic Perpignan-Barcelona road avoided it by running inland. It is only recently that good roads have linked the necklaces of beaches to the outer world and that hotels have been built in the little port towns. These have very gradually covered over the scars left by the Civil War which ended in 1938 in this very region. The cork harvesting has been organized by Armstrong Cork Co. There is electricity and running water, but otherwise the time machine seems to turn back several centuries. A mile inland. the Catalan farmers still plow their vineyards with wooden shares and stake their fortune of the year on their ancient olive groves.

In July and August, the Costa Brava is crowded with French and German tourists. But the hotels are not half-full at Easter time. To hear the Spaniards tell it, the water is still too cool for swimming, although anyone who swims throughout a New England summer will find it quite all right. In any case, a million flowers swarm across the fields, the sun is bright, the fish are running and wild mock-oranges scent the ravines.

I was staying at the little port of Palamós last Easter when I heard of the Fiesta Sanctificada at Verges, a hill town some fifteen miles inland. The celebration, held on Holy Thursday night, takes the form of a mystery drama such as those once performed on the steps of French or English cathedrals in the Middle Ages. But this Catalan mystery has been enacted by the townspeople of Verges, without known interruption, since some time in the twelfth century. Its purity, its mysticism put it in a completely different class from other Passion plays, such as the famous one at Oberammergau. Verges draws a thousand or so people from the neighborhood, but otherwise seems unexploited and unknown.

The play is enacted in the market place, which is surrounded by very old buildings that at night look quite oriental. A platform has been erected in front of the town hall, from which the actors emerge. A few hundred benches

Will you build a 1940 house in 1962?

In the 1940's very few houses were built with central air conditioning—mainly because the cost of cooling was three times as much as it is now.

Today Carrier air conditioning in an average custombuilt, three-bedroom house costs about $800 more than heating alone. This adds only a few dollars a month to your mortgage payments.

Does $800 sound surprisingly low? It is. Carrier central air conditioning is one of the few quality products that have come down in price during recent years.

Central air conditioning never costs less than it does when you build. And the added investment will make your house worth more when you sell. Meanwhile, everyone sleeps better, eats better, feels better—even in the hottest weather. There are fewer allergy reactions. Rooms stay cleaner. Indoor living is happier and entertaining so much easier.

Small wonder that so many homes enjoy Carrier air conditioning today—more than any other make!

Your nearby Carrier dealer can give you the exact cost of air conditioning your home. He's listed in the Yellow Pages of the telephone book. Carrier Air Conditioning Company, Syracuse, New York.

NOTES FOR THE HOSTESS

BY DIANA BRYAN

I guess we all have friends who can work wonders with three or four flowers and a few wellchosen leaves, but it's not my gift. To create anything worth looking at. I need a hothouse-ful of flowers to choose from and foolproof containers that all but do the arranging for me. In winter this can be expensive, so I'm more than pleased with my new 10-inch wrought-iron fruit tree that was made in Italy. (I found it at Mayhew-Copley in New York.) The dull green leaves hold fruit or vegetables, big, flat blooms, straw flowers, fancy bonbons, what have you, all to good effect. I can combine grapes and tangerines on the tree with pleasurable drama and get a sense of creative achievement out of all proportion to my native talent. Can't wait for Thanksgiving when I'm going to try fresh cranberries and walnuts-or Christmas when it's to be holly, ivy and red carnations.

EASY-TO-FILL CENTERPIECE

A classic mystery around our house: The case of the disappearing doily, or Why are the breakfast table mats always in short supply? I may try to nail down my latest acquisitions, I like them so much. Found them at Bloomingdale's and they're made of black-and-white mattress ticking, plastic laminated for heavy duty, and latex-backed for sure protection against heat, scratching or sticking. I saw travs, too-in red, blue or pink ticking. I'd love to own one of each color, they are so fresh and trim.

Don't know if they are all over the country yet, but we can now buy the darndest and best avocados. They are dwarfs—the size and general shape of a big sweet pickle—and pitless in the bargain. The flavor is particularly good. They look so appetizing when served, peeled but whole, with Belgian endive and black olives in a salad.

INTERNATIONAL GLASSES

A Danish, Chinese highball glass made by a famous German porcelain company may sound like an unfortunate miscegnation, but actually it's terrific. Bjorn Wiinblad has designed a stunning set of glassware for Rosenthal, each piece carrying the thick, glassy seal of SHOU, oriental symbol of good fortune. The extra-tall highball glasses are my favorite. Capacious, balanced, pleasant to hold, they are splendid for iced tea or coffee too. Mine were a house present from an old Winnetka friend and came via Marshall Field's, but I know I can always find some more wherever Rosenthal glassware is sold.

The Houghtons are great enthusiasts of trapshooting, so much so that they've just completed their own stations in their meadow. To celebrate the event, Dolly Houghton staged a superlative brunch party following a Saturday shoot.

The centerpiece was most apt—two antique wooden decoys afloat on a mirror landscaped with moss, lichen, and spurts and sprays of dried grasses here and there. Dolly's old pine table has such a sleek patina from generations of TLC that there was no need for a cloth. At one end of it creamed finnan haddie simmered gently in a serious-sized copper chafing dish. I asked her where she managed to find such a businesslike model, for a nobly proportioned 4-quarter it was, heavy and hand-

IMPERIAL FRENCH PROVINCIAL—Stereophonic High Fidelity, superb FM/AM radio with provision for FM multi-plexing. Choice of fine woods—$695.

Now the fidelity of your recordings can last a lifetime—you can enjoy enduring tonal purity and the spectacular dimensional realism of Magnavox true stereophonic high fidelity. Music becomes magic everywhere in the room! Only Magnavox brings you the world's finest automatic record player...the fabulous new Micromatic. It protects your records. They will sound like new, even beyond 1000 plays.

Only from Magnavox

the sound of perfection in stereophonic high fidelity

With a magnificent Magnavox, you'll hear true stereo separation and an incredible tonal purity never before achieved in a single cabinet.

Superb sound literally fills your room. Bass frequencies (which provide greatest stereo effect) are projected from cabinet sides and reflected from your walls, to give music greater depth and "presence." Treble frequencies (so essential to fidelity and timbre) are front projected through exponential horns, outward-angled for maximum stereo separation.

Magnavox tonal purity is even more impressive; the result of finest components, all perfectly matched and balanced so the entire system "plays as one instrument." Included:

AMAZING MICROMATIC RECORD PLAYER WITH 10 YEAR DIAMOND STYLUS GUARANTEE—Automatically plays all records with a featherlight 1/10 ounce touch . . . records last a lifetime; show no wear even after 1,000 plays . . . surface noise and distortion are virtually eliminated. The Diamond Stylus is replaced free if it shows excessive wear within 10 years! You get true pitch, too—turntable speed is always within \pm 1% of absolute—no "wow" or "flutter."

4 AMPLIFIERS—Each stereo channel has its own set of treble and bass amplifiers for the most precise reproduction of all tones; no intermodulation distortion.

TWO 1,000 CYCLE EXPONENTIAL HORNS . . . TWO 15" BASS SPEAKERS—Horns provide wider range and purest reproduction of high frequency tones (to which the human ear is most sensitive). Even difficult, transient piano and drum tones come through perfectly. Combined with the horns, the two powerful bass speakers (one for each stereo channel), give over 10 times the speaker efficiency of conventional instruments.

NEW GOLD SEAL WARRANTY—Magnavox Gold Seal Warranty instruments are so flawless, so reliable that all parts and service are guaranteed for 1 full year; the only such guarantee ever made. Magnavox is truly the finest... your best buy on any basis of comparison. Sold only by authorized dealers, listed in your Yellow Pages. Other consoles from $148.

NOTES FOR THE HOSTESS

some to boot. From Saks Fifth Avenue was the answer.

Our latest do-it-yourself Cordon Bleu concoction: Take those marvelous uncooked crescent rolls that come eight to a tube and roll them up with a finely minced, highly seasoned meat stuffing, cottage cheese, or even prune and raisin filling. Then bake. They are really delicious!

A lot of easy-does-it cooking tricks are just that, perfectly all right and simple but nothing four-star. Not so Green Goddess sauce (where do they get those names!), a sauce par excellence for hot or cold crustacea, poached fish (especially salmon) and asparagus. To make it, you use half mayonnaise, half sour cream, lots of chopped parsley, chopped chives (the frozen ones are fine), fresh dill when available and six to eight anchovy filets. Then give the whole thing a whirl in a blender. It comes out a lovely green and tastes miraculous.

KASHMIRIAN CURATE'S HELPER

What next? Ellie Spency brought back from Gump's in San Francisco a Kashmirian curate's helper, of all things. Although it certainly sounds unlikely, it makes an attractive and highly useful little serving piece. Hand-carved of smooth Kashmirian walnut, with four fold-out plate holders, the stand is of high-tea capacity, big enough for a cake, sandwiches, biscuits et al. yet compact and easy to pass around with one hand. When not in use, it collapses into almost nothing. It would be wonderful for bridgegame delicacies, far more sensible than my old, three-tiered job, which tends not only to tip, but forces you to stoop to reach the lowest rack. Excellent, too, for cocktail time when jump-up-anddown hors d'oeuvre passing is such a bother.

SIX WAYS TO SPOT A NEWPORT ANTIQUE

When amateur antique hunters hear a dealer boast, "It's a Newport piece," they may well wonder how anyone can pin down to one city the origin of unlabeled 200-year-old furniture. In many ways, furniture made in Newport, R. I., in the eighteenth century resembles that made in other American Colonies at that time. But cabinet-making in Newport was dominated by two large families of craftsmen—the Townsends and the Goddards—whose members often worked together, sharing both their tools and their design ideas. Thus, they developed a recognizable style. Here are six of its most unique details. (For news of a new group of reproductions of Newport antiques, see page 150.)

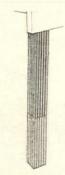

The Rhode Island blockfront, a raised panel surmounted by a carved shell, is probably most famous invention of Newport cabinetmakers.

The ogee-bracket foot on Newport chests is distinctive in shape and often decorated with a delicate scroll of beading.

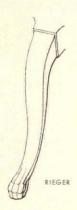

Stocky cabriole legs, restrained in shape and joining their pad feet well out near the edges, are found on many Newport side chairs.

Stopped fluting embellishes the square legs of tables and chairs. Entire leg is fluted, but in lower portion, reeding fills in the flutes.

Claw-and-ball feet with undercut talons and no webbing are found on American furniture only among the pieces that originated in Newport.

Paw feet with realistically carved toes are often seen on the legs of Newport tripod tables, firescreens or washstands.

the Foam Rubber Mattress

What's the celebration for? Koylon's 25 years as the luxury bedding. And sleep is one place where you owe yourself luxury...365 nights a year. You need a mattress that lulls you to sleep, supports you as gently and naturally as water. You need U.S. Koylon Foam.

What is Koylon? Not an old-fashioned collection of heavy coils and lumps. Not some new-fangled foam with more promises than proof, but the finest of latex rubber foams, creamy white, filled with fresh air. More, a Koylon mattress has a special reversible construction, with hundreds of small cores on BOTH sides, not just a skimpy few on one side.

Results? The perfect sleeping surface. Firm but not hard. Light enough to turn with one hand, but not flimsy. The most air-conditioned mattress there is . . . non-allergenic, always odor-free and fresh. A mattress you know will last. The first Koylons still have their original thickness, shape and resilience!

See why Koylon is the champagne of foams? Most buoyant, most refreshing you can buy. A little more expensive—but more than worth it. Try a U.S. Koylon mattress today and sleep on luxury for the rest of your life!

In Medium, Firm and Extra Firm densities, each with a matching boxspring.

Now...clean your of airborne with a new Honeywell

Fits in duct work, traps up to 95%* of airborne irritants...electronically!

*As measured by National Bureau of Standards Dust Spot Method.

In a shaft of sunlight, you can often see a cloud of dust particles in search of a victim—you. Dust that settles on furniture; soils freshly cleaned draperies; smokes up windows, mirrors, crystal—making work and more work.

You dust, dust, dust. If you're allergic to dust or pollen, you sneeze and suffer. Yet—until now—there has been little you could do to get rid of dust.

But—hosanna!—now you can virtually eliminate damaging dust!

A new advance in electronics makes it possible.

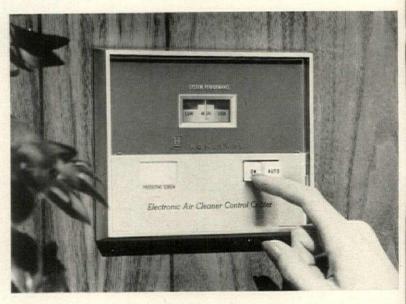

Now, a remarkable new home-size Electronic Air Cleaner from Honeywell extracts dust and pollen from the air—before they can smudge up your home or aggravate allergies.

Fitting in the duct work of any forced air heating or air conditioning system, it cleans the air CLEAN—not in just a single room, but all through the house.

It traps the tiny bits of grime that ordinary filters can't stop!

The ordinary filters you probably have on your heating or cooling plant depend on a tangle of fibers that screen out the bigger particles, can't stop millions of smaller impurities—dust, ash, greasy smoke, similar irritants.

The tiny particles are the stickiest—clinging to walls and windows, smoking up crystal, dirtying draperies. They're so small you can't see them, only notice the damage they've done when you move a picture on the wall. This is the grime with most of the soiling power. And the Honeywell cleaner traps it electronically—removes up to 95%* of all particles passing through the system. The result—

This handsome control panel in your living area is the new sign of a modern home—with the air cleaned of dust and pollen by electronic action. It's a conversation piece with a purpose: The panel shows your Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner is working at peak efficiency, signals you whenever the unit needs cleaning.

Electronic Air Cleaner

Cleanest house you ever lived in, cleanest air you ever breathed!

Does this sound almost too good to be true? The fact is, the principle of the Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner has been proved for years in hospitals and comparable buildings where clean air is vital. It's the most effective practical system known for trapping airborne dust and dirt.

What Honeywell has now done is to package these same benefits for your use in an appliance of practical home-size

With any forced air heating or cooling system, it's easily installed in duct work. Backed by Honeywell, home comfort leaders for more than 76 years.

Easy for you to clean. Three or four times a year is usually often enough. And this may surprise you: it uses no more electric current than a 40-watt bulb.

Air Cleaner ordinary filters miss and price, easily installed in the central forced-air system of either a new or existing home. It costs no more than a good refrigerator, uses no more current than a 40-watt bulb.

And what a wonderful difference automatic air cleaning makes!

Air passing through the system is freed of 99% of the pollen that may aggravate allergies-cleaned of tobacco smoke and odors, other irritants. Dusting is cut to a fraction. Mirrors and crystal stay sparkling-draperies and slipcovers, fresh and clean—far longer than ever before. In fact, you may find the Honeywell Electronic Air Cleaner pays for itself just in savings on cleaning and decorating!

So why dust and polish all the time, when there's now such a practical way to keep dust out of the air to begin with? The coupon below makes it easy for you to take the next step into this new era of modern living.

ALLERGICS: This is a preventive measure, not a treatment. See your Doctor. Ask him what electronic air cleaning may do for you.

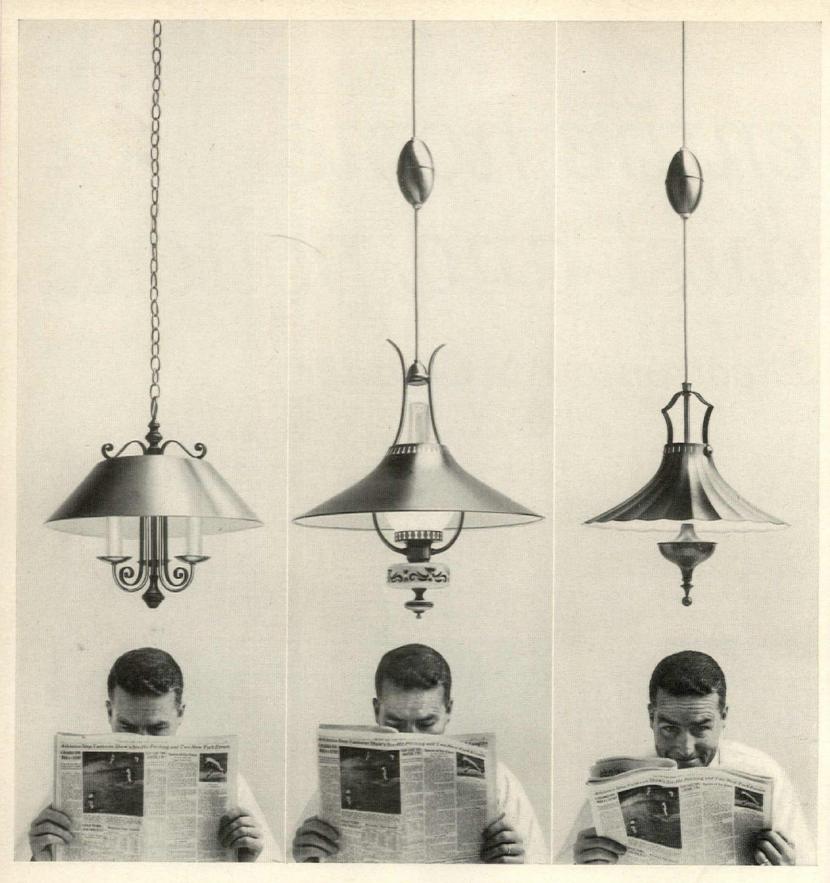

Take a long step toward a dust-free home

For husbands who read at breakfast

(and those who look at their wives)

A Lightolier in the breakfast room does more than aid and abet editors. True, it gives good light. But it also gives full status to the dinette, creating a pleasant atmosphere for most any occasion.

In the fixtures above, the "eggs" are not ornaments. They conceal pulleys which allow you to raise or lower the fixtures for cheerful good-morning lighting, or cozy late evening glow.

Nor are the crisp good looks an accident. They come from the assembled talents of home fashion experts, designers and artisans ...to make Lightoliers that are classics, now and in years to come.

For instance, in the Lightolier at center, an authentic frosted chimney surmounts a font of hand painted porcelain. The flared shade is antiqued brass with tarnish-proof finish. Imagine it, or the two flanking fixtures, in Early American or Provincial surroundings and you'll appreciate how successful these fixtures are.

All three Lightoliers and many many more...traditional, transitional and contemporary...can be seen at your local electrical distributor. The prices are modest.

Time: To redecorate

Do it quickly, easily with READY-MADES

SCENE CHANGERS IN FABRICS WITH Pelanese CONTEMPORARY FIBERS

Shown in settings created by Dorothy Draper

New inspiration for fashionable decorating...the latest collections of ready-made draperies, curtains, bedroom ensembles...glorious new room settings by noted designer Dorothy Draper. See them all on the next six pages. See the fabrics that add so much elegance to the new readymades. Opulent fabrics—lush-textured fabrics—fabrics rich in the many beauties of Celanese acetate, the beauty fiber. Look and you'll be inspired by all the exciting new ways to use ready-mades to change the scene in your home. Celanese Fibers Company, 522 Fifth Ave., New York 36 (a division of Celanese Corporation of America). Celanese®

For pure drama in decorating nothing is so effective as boldly patterned draperies hung ceiling to floor. Today you can buy them ready-made, like the ones shown in a luxurious antique satin made with Celanese acetate. Actually, ready-mades now come in a vast range of widths and lengths to save you the time, trouble and expense of the made-to-order variety, and give you real home fashion.

Lined, about $13 pr. Available at Banner Whitehill, Indianapolis & branches; Fantle's, Sioux Falls; Lovemans, Chattanooga; May Co.-Mission Valley Center, San Diego. More stores listed on opposite page.

Ingenious decorating ideas come built right into this season's ready-mades. See if you can pick out the optical illusions in this room. On the bed, what looks like a separate coverlet and pleated underskirt is really a one-piece taffeta bedspread made with "sealed-in color" Celaperm acetate. In the background, ready-made taffeta draperies hung on curved rods give the impression of "bays".

Distinguished styling and superb choice of fabric have given ready-made home fashions even greater popularity this year. Noted designer Dorothy Draper used ready-made café curtains to add zest and color to this dining terrace. Your own store has a variety of ready-mades for you to create original and imaginative effects that will change the scene in your home.

Don't put off redecorating because you think it takes so much time—or so much money, for that matter. A look at your store's new collection of ready-made draperies will inspire you to action. For ready-mades are by no means high priced, an easy way to up-to-the-minute home fashion. To quote one professional designer: "Redecorate with ready-mades this morning, have a party tonight!"

Self-confidence is one thing most women are short of when it comes to decorating. You may know how it feels to fret over which color is right, what fabrics are in fashion. Ready-mades are the answer. You can't go wrong because the fabric designs and colors were chosen by expert stylists who know decorating trends. Custom-look decorating is easy to achieve now with ready-mades.

Fortunately, for all its custom beauty, this ensemble is ready-made, ready for you in stores now. Its imaginative styling and inventive use of a border design are superb examples of the quality of today's ready-made home fashions.

H&G's Newsletter

What's in store for your home: new products, ideas and trends

News underfoot: Ceramic tiles are now available in a range of standard designs that are truly decorative. New warm brilliant colors; a variety of unglazed and matte finishes; squares, hexagons and rectangles; stylized floral patterns; pictorial tiles; three-dimensional patterns all add up to a wide choice. As a result, tiles have risen from floor level and are used to band a room as a baseboard, to cover countertops or walls, to give an interesting frame to a fireplace.

Hi-fi stereophonic speakers, sometimes difficult to place gracefully around a room, now come combined with lights on a floor-to-ceiling pole. You can get light poles with one, two or three Verti-Sonic speakers that pivot a full 360 degrees and include woofers, tweeters, mid-range speakers et al., in any combination you want. The pole comes in walnut, polished or satin brass. Lord's Electronics, Inc., 10 East Kinzie St., Chicago, Ill.

• Another new approach to better listening is the stereophonic system in which the speakers literally bounce sound against the wall at the back of the console, spreading the music all over the room and eliminating that one lone spot of good listening. (For more details, see Looking and Listening, page 208.)

The Teflon-coated fry pan for fat-free cooking is winning popularity prizes everywhere, but not so the crude wooden spatula that comes with it. Both newsy and welcome is a full-size metal turner specially treated so that it will not mar Teflon-coated cookware. Available in two sizes. Ekco Products Co., 1949 N. Cicero Ave., Chicago, 39, Ill.

- New slant on year-round storage is provided by a handsome walnut tallboy, completely cedar lined and with a sliding rod for hanging clothing, adjustable shelves. 62½" high. The Lane Co., Altavista, Va.
- Broiling has been added to the accomplishments of the ambitious electric fry pan. There's a new buffet fry pan (immersible) that turns into a broiler when you merely remove the heat control from the base and plug it into the lid. The broiling element is similar to that used in an electric range. A glass window in the lid of the pan gives a clear view of broiling progress; vent releases excess steam. We estinghouse Electric Corp., Mansfield, Ohio.

• Olé! Taking the bull by the horns, a 12" stereo recording, "The Brave Bulls," provides what must surely be the ultimate in do-it-yourself. The record—bullfight music by Mexico's Banda Taurina at the Plaza de Toros—is accompanied by a bullfight handbook complete with the history of the sport and even diagrams on how to do it, should the spirit move you! There are posters and tickets for extra atmosphere. It's strictly up to you, however, to provide your own bull and ring. Audio Fidelity, Inc., 770 11th Ave., New York, 19, N.Y.

Many, many years ago, a very young old man invented the pleasant custom of gift giving...he received much applause.

His name was Santa Claus.

This was before the race for space and the only things in orbit were Santa and his reindeer on the annual trip from the North Pole.

It was even before Rock 'n' Roll.

Later (in 1939 to be exact), he asked Miles Kimball to help him in his good work. "The only thing," he said in a voice most impassioned,

"Please keep Christmas gentle and old-fashioned."

We have, too...with such old-fashioned policies as always paying the postage fee...our guarantee

And service as quick as it can be.

And, now, may you have the merriest Christmas ever and the happiest New Year yearly,

And we mean this most sincerely.

The only way to know you're getting all the pleasure of real Scotch whisky ...

...is to know what real Scotch tastes like. A Scotch whisky in the best tradition is one that is soft on the tongue and gentle to the palate. Almost timid at first, its flavor slowly awakens the taste buds, and the Scotch's true character reveals itself. The taste of a fine Scotch is delicate, slightly "peaty," almost mysterious, with a fragrance you might expect to sense in some secluded Scottish glen. Of course, there is never an aftertaste. If you haven't tasted VAT 69 lately, you're in for a delightful experience. You'll discover all the lightness...all the pleasure...found only in real Scotch with Genuine Highland Character.

Fresh from Motorola

Stereo Hi-Fi and Stereo FM

in a cabinet of the Drexel Touraine collection

Gracious styling blends with the latest electronic advance—Stereo FM—to make Motorola® Stereo Hi-Fi for 1962 the most exciting to see and hear.

Drexel Touraine is a delightful presentation of French Provincial design. The cabinet has all exposed solids and veneers of genuine walnut.

Tonal purity—whether from a stereo record or a Stereo FM broadcast—is achieved by Motorola's use of three separate amplifiers and three separate speaker systems (instead of the usual two).

New Vibrasonic lets you dial the exact amount of reflected sound energy needed to compensate for the acoustical variations of your room.

New Motorola Stereo FM (optional) installs easily; may be added to the set now or later when Stereo FM broadcasting begins in your area.

Below: Motorola TV in Touraine cabinetry with sliding tambour doors. New 23" Picture Frame screen (over-all diag. meas.; 283 sq. in. viewing area) is featured in this, the most reliable TV ever. Available with Remote Control.

Solid brass bottle opener-corkscrew imported from the Orient makes an unusual and highly practical bar accessory. Shank is beautifully hand engraved and hand chased. The opener-handle untwists to reveal the corkscrew. 71/2" long, it is tarnish proof. $2.88. Ppd. Palley, HG10, 2263 E. Vernon, Los Angeles, Calif.

Display favorite bottles of perfume on an oval mirror tray fitted with a filigree gilt gallery, a velvet lined drawer. Drawer is antique white flecked with gold, provides good storage for often used jewelry. 16" oval is 111/2" at center. Drawer is 61/2" x 8". $12.95 plus 60¢ postage. Downs, HG10, 1014 Davis Street, Evanston, Ill.

Tempt the palate

The simplest recipes can be turned into mouth-watering delights when properly seasoned with herbs or spices. Hang a decorative chart on the kitchen wall. CONFIDENTIAL Christmas ADVERTISEMENT

This ad concerns the world's scarcest Christmas gift. Cruel fate dictates that millions of people must live out their lives never even seeing a Royal Riviera Pear*, let alone tasting one. Once these fabulous pears were forbidden fruit to all but European royalty. After the king-queen business suffered severe losses, these dazzling natural wonders were served only in the finest restaurants, at $1 a copy and up, not including tip. But for the past several years, my brother Harry and I have saved the entire crop for extra-special Christmas gifts. Even though Royal Riviera Pears are sold by mail order only (never in stores), we never have enough to go 'round. Every year we weep all the way to the postoffice as we return thousands of checks and orders. Thus you perceive our wisdom in not making this ad overly inviting, thereby making sure that millions will ignore it. Should you want to particularly impress any favored friends, relatives, clients, etc., simply send list of names and addresses and tell us how to sign your name on the personal greeting that accompanies each beautiful gift box. Enclose check or M.O. no charges, no C.O.D.'s, please. GIFT BOX NO. 1, containing 10 to 14 immense pears (so juicy you eat them with a spoon), is $4.35 ppd. GIFT BOX NO. 2, with 16 to 20 Royal Rivieras, is probably America's biggest Christmas gift bargain at a puny $5.35 ppd. But act now. He who hesitates is pearless. Perfect delivery and embarrassingly lavish thanks positively guaranteed.

Beauty and the Beast

Relax. You don't have to fuss over carpet that has 100% Cumuloft* nylon in the pile.

Carpet made of Cumuloft nylon in the pile is the answer if you're looking for carpet that's unusually beautiful, yet still practical. Cumuloft is an improved continuous filament textured nylon yarn. Strong. Durable. Resilient. Easy to clean and care for. No problem with pilling, fuzzing, shedding. Liquids which could cause stains can't penetrate the yarn. Neither can moths, or mildew. Cumuloft is textured by an exclusive Chemstrand process to make carpet pile thick and lush, with rich and brilliantly clear colors. Carpet labeled "Cumuloft nylon" is easy to find. 17 top mills make it! Among those mills licensed to use the Cumuloft trademark when the carpet pile meets Chemstrand's rigid specifications are: Barwick, Cabin Crafts, Callaway, Coronet, Firth, Forrest, Karagheusian, Loomweve, Magee, Masland, Monarch, Pacific, Philadelphia, Roxbury and Wunda Weve.

DECORATIVE GLASS MOBILES

You can make with Castoglas

You can make with Castoglas

Fun to make—fun to look at as they turn and sparkle at the slightest touch. This colorful plncushion model is as light and ethereal as the fleecy clouds against which it was photographed. It's really surprising how many decorative uses you will discover for these delightful accents. They can be hung in windows, in doorways or from wall brackets, Suspended from the dining room lamp and lighted from above, they make most unusual animated centerpieces, floating in space a few inches above the table top. How Was it Made? Glass-clear and brilliantly colored liquid Castoglas was poured upon a sheet of cellophane or aluminum to form patterns of many shapes. It hardened within 30 minutes at room temperature. The desired shapes were then bent by hand into three-dimensional forms. Takes just a few seconds. The method is so truly simple a child can do it. Very inexpensive, too. The material for this one costs less than a dollar. For complete directions and all kinds of other glass-shaping ideas that are really different, send 25¢ to Dept. LBS5.

CURRIER & IVES PRINT

I have what I think is an authentic Currier & Ives print. It was a wedding gift to my grandmother in 1875. The caption reads, "Charlie Is My Darling." I have never seen another copy, nor is this print listed in my Currier & Ives book. Is it authentic?

A.H.H.-Topeka, Kan.

Yes, you have a real Currier & Ives print, published in 1872. It is listed in Currier & Ives Prints, An Illustrated Check List by Frederick A. Conningham, compiled in 1949.

CURULE CHAIR

Could you give me any information about my fine old chair with carved walnut frame—including its approximate age?

F.P.-Killarney, Fla.

Yours is an American Victorian armchair, dating about 1865-1875. It is called a curule chair, since its design was indirectly inspired by the Roman sella curulis, or curved chair. Vassar College, opened in 1865, had curule chairs in the study rooms.

PEPPERBOX PISTOL

My old six-shooter pistol has a caplike hammer and revolving barrel. The mark reads Allen Thurber & Co., Worcester, Mass. How old is the pistol? H.T.—Kansas City, Mo.

Thurber & Co. was in business only two years, 1855 and 1856. A revolving barrel pistol was called a pepperbox.

AMERICAN WATER WAGON

Can you tell me the year this water wagon was made and by whom?

E.J.F.—Stamford, Conn.

Water wagons date back to the eighteenth century. This one is like those used on large farms, construction jobs and by circuses from about 1880 to 1910. The running gear for such water wagons was made in a local wagon shop; the circular tanks, by coopers. Earlier examples had smaller wheels.

PLATE DECORATED
AT DRESDEN

Enclosed is a photograph of a plate (and its mark) that has been in my family for at least forty years. It has been described as Dresden, but I suspect it could be French. The china is more grayish than white with many tiny cracks in the glaze. The mark on the back is in a blue underglaze. Can you give me any information about this plate?

P.F.—Jersey City, N. J.

The mark identifies your plate as decorated at Dresden in the nineteenth century by Carl Thieme. He was a decorator of porcelains and mostly obtained his china from the Meissen factory. Many were "seconds," which explains the tiny cracks.

BOHEMIAN FIGURINE

How old is this figurine we purchased and where was it made? The marks include a crown and the word Amphora in an oval.

L.G.F.-West Roxbury, Mass.

The figurine dates between 1892 and 1918. The mark is that of Reissner & Kessel, Turn, Bohemia, who specialized in porcelain figurines. The firm, founded in 1892, changed its trademark in 1918 when Bohemia became Czechoslovakia.

FRENCH PROVINCIAL CHEST

We bought this chest at an auction and want to know something about it.

G.E., Jr.—South Kent, Conn.

Judging from its arched panels and plain hardware, I would say you have a French Provincial low cabinet, probably made in the early nineteenth century.

BOHEMIAN GLASS

CHICAGO MELODEON

This glass vase is one of a pair my grandmother received as a wedding present in 1887. The center is opaque white, the top and bottom, ruby red. Was it made in Europe or America, and is it an antique?

J.G.H .- Vancouver, Wash.

Vases like yours were made by the Bohemian glass factories between 1860 and 1880. They were imported as mantel decorations and are now considered antiques.

We would appreciate learning more about the history of our melodeon marked W. W. Kimball, Chicago, Illinois. R.G.—Virginia, Ill.

William W. Kimball started his factory shortly after the famous fire of 1871, and it became the largest maker of melodeons in the Midwest, producing 4,000 a year. The case style dates yours about 1875.

The measure of tradition

This season of mists and mellow fruitfulness, when the aging year seems more engaging than spring, is a good time to reconsider the ways of the past. Of what value are the old forms, the old customs? What can we learn from tradition? To find worth-while answers takes clear eyes and an open mind. The line between intelligent appreciation and mindless nostalgia may at times seem very fine. But it is one that should always be recognized.

With our own warnings firmly in mind, H&G in recent months has taken a prolonged look at traditional designs of many kinds—houses, furniture, gardens—as well as at traditional patterns of living. Here are some of the answers we found to the questions above, points that we propose you look for as you scrutinize tradition for yourself:

A sense of proportion. Notice the size of an old fireplace in relation to the panel above it, or the length of a chair leg in relation to the height of the back. The inches don't matter. But if you look long enough, your eye will remember the relationship and the memory will serve as a yardstick with which you can judge contemporary designs when you see them for the first time.

The difference between simplicity and austerity—as well as between the ornamental and the ornate. Among traditional designs, you will find some as spare as any turned out by modern machines, yet the old ones may seem to have more appeal. Is this mere nostalgia? Or is it, perhaps, a subtle softening line, a warmth of texture? You will find richness of ornament, too. But if you look carefully, you will see that the embellishment we never tire of is the kind that knows where to stop.

The close allegiance between beauty and practicality. You may be surprised to discover extremely elegant designs that incorporate very down-to-earth, labor-saving, time-saving details. These in themselves are often worth copying—but even more worth copying is the traditional idea of wedding beauty to practicality.

A forgotten palette of color. In the old rooms, the old fabrics and wallpapers, you will see shades and tints you may have known all your life, but never thought of putting together in just that way. These traditional colorings are well worth borrowing, and likely to look as fresh today as a brand new rainbow.

Some aspects of tradition, however, are only to smile at. To arrange a room as if central heating and modern lighting had yet to be invented makes no more sense than to venture forth on a super highway in an electric coupé. To model your living on a pattern created a hundred years ago—or ten—is only to pass up the fun of living today.

In this issue of H&G you will find considerable opportunity for examining the fine points of traditional design (see pages 146-157) as well as a challenge to examine your own traditions of living. The place for you to start is on the next page.

How to put

NEW LIFE IN YOUR LIVING ROOM

The living room has come back into its own as the place it was originally intended to be—a room for living. When the carefree, comfortable family room first came into popularity, soon after World War II, the more formal living room was to a large extent abandoned. It became, by default, a company-mannered room reserved for entertaining, rather like the old front parlor of our grandmother's day. Today, however, we feel the need for a room that provides for a more expansive type of family living and we are rediscovering the pleasures and advantages of a living room. This does not necessarily mean that the family room is now, in its turn, abandoned, since this more informal room is still the best place for certain pastimes—such as teen-age dancing parties, active indoor games, hobbies that take up a great deal of space or tend to be messy (like painting or modeling).

The best way to bring your living room back to life and give it new meaning is to broaden its scope by furnishing it for a variety of family activities—to convert it into a room for day-in, day-out living, not just a center for polite conversation and entertaining. Make your living room a place where in equal comfort you can enjoy listening to music, reading, dining, writing letters or pursuing a hobby. Even if space is limited, you can provide for these extra activities in dual-purpose areas such as a work corner that doubles for games. If space is no problem, you can use your furniture to shape the room into individual areas and at the same time preserve the feeling of spaciousness.

The type of extra activity you provide for in your living room depends, of course, on the particular interests and needs of your own family. Here and on the following nine pages is a collection of living rooms, all with more than one use and planned to meet diversified needs.

SPACIOUS LIVING ROOM WORKS WELL AS AN INFORMAL DINING ROOM

• PLENTY OF CHAIRS AND TABLES make it possible for designer Henry End to use his living room in Miami Shores, Fla., for informal meals as well as cocktails and conversation. Outsize coffee table of ebony and marble has a spacious enough surface to hold all the food for a buffet supper—or the first course alone if the rest of the meal is to be served in the dining room (up two steps behind steel-framed chairs). Small tables stationed between sofas and chairs are handy for setting down plates. A leather-upholstered hassock on wheels rolls up to table for extra seating. Long rosewood cabinet along right wall houses hi-fi equipment for music during meals or after-dinner entertainment. The collection of paintings and plaques on the brick wall affords simultaneous delight for the eyes.

THREE WAYS TO HOUSE A HOBBY IN YOUR LIVING ROOM

• A BLEND OF ART AND MUSIC, above, delights the eye as well as the ear in the living room of Mr. and Mrs. Ricardo Montalban's house in Beverly Hills, Calif. While music is played on piano or hi-fi equipment (out of sight on left wall), listeners can also enjoy the delightful variety of art on all sides: over the fireplace, a modern painting and antique terra-cotta figurines from the Orient; over the piano, a portrait of Mr. Montalban; throughout the room, objets d'art from India; framed by sliding glass doors to the garden court, a small white statue. LURNITURE SHAPES A LIVING ROOM INTO SEPARATE AREAS FOR THREE DIFFERENT PURSUITS

• A LUXURIOUS LEDGE FOR LOUNGING, left, is arranged in an alcove originally intended for dining (see top of plan, below) in Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Rothman's living room. The ledge is a favorite spot where Mrs. Rothman likes to play with her baby daughter after the child's nap. The cushioned corner also makes an inviting, private spot to curl up in with a book away from the living room proper. When the Rothmans entertain, the whole alcove provides extra space for guests to mill about. • A QUIET CORNER FOR WORK, above, to the right of the entrance hall, doubles as a dining area. Long pedestal table is an equally good height for desk work or dining. The bracket lamps on the bookshelves make it easy to read titles and they can also be swiveled about to shed light on the table. Six straight-backed chairs distributed about the room are set around the table at mealtime. • A COMFORT ABLE SPOT FOR INFORMAL MEALS, below, in the curve of window wall provides a variety of seating—roomy lounge chairs, a deep-cushioned sofa, two dining chairs—grouped around a white marble coffee table. Room designed by Ward Bennett.

ONE SMALL ROOM WITH THE PLEASURES OF THREE

• CONVERTIBLE LIVING AREA, left, at one end of a long room, solves the problem of where to put overnight guests in a small apartment. Corner seats can be joined with matching ottomans (kept out of sight in hall) to make two single beds. (Or the threepiece combinations can be used as sofas when entertaining a large group.) Low coffee table doubles as a bedside table for nighttime paraphernalia. Simple window treatment of white casement pulled taut on brass rods softly diffuses morning light for sleepers. • A COMPLETE ENTERTAINMENT CENTER, left, installed along one wall of the room can be enjoyed in comfort from the pillow-piled seats in the living area. The cabinets with flush doors above TV and hi-fi speaker hold other music equipment and a collection of records and books. Cabinet to right of these houses a bar. • SPACE FOR DINING, below left, is created at one end of the same living room (next to kitchen door) by keeping the size of dining furniture to a minimum. The round table takes up less space than a rectangular one, and the transparency of the glass top minimizes the table even more. The four slender highbacked chairs double as extra seating in living area. End wall painted red gives dining area the intimate feeling of a separate room. Designed by Marjorie Allen.

A LARGE ROOM PLANNED FOR THE ENJOYMENT OF MUSIC

. A PIANO SUSPENDED FROM THE WALL, above, is the major source of music in the living room of Mr. and Mrs. Abbe Rabiner's house in South Orange, N. J. The instrument, which has belonged to Mrs. Rabiner since she was a little girl, originally had heavy, old-fashioned legs that seemed to diminish the size of the room. So the Rabiners suspended the piano from the wall on steel beams and lacquered it cream for a lighter look. Two seating centers provide plenty of space for everyone to listen to the music in comfort. Since the house has no family room, the Rabiners' teen-age children also use the living room to entertain their own guests. The hall to the right of the fireplace was widened to provide plenty of space for their dancing parties. • A COLLECTION OF MUSIC EQUIPMENT, left, installed in the wall behind folding doors, plays records, tapes and radio. The cabinet on the left is a tiny bar complete with refrigerator, small sink and shelves for glass storage. Room designed by Mallory-Tillis, Inc.

A LIVING ROOM THAT GROWS WITH THE FAMILY

Time and sound planning are two of the most obliging allies a young budget can have. To prove it, this living room—sixth in H&G's BRIGHT-ON-A-BUDGET series—was designed to be furnished in three stages. The furniture for each stage was chosen with an eye to both present and future livability. The long-range goal: a comfortable room for daily family activities including music (both practicing and listening), which would still be dressed-up enough for adult parties. What makes the plan progress smoothly from one stage to the next is the bold deployment of color—another staunch ally of the limited budget.

The first stage lays the foundation with the basic furniture: the sofa, chairs, bookcases and coffee table. The cane-arm chairs were chosen for their light, airy look (important to keep the completed room from looking crowded), and the tall, arched bookcases were decided upon because they contribute height to the room and offer the decorative potential of open shelves. The coffee table—a round of travertine resting on a plywood base to which brass legs have been attached—adds a look of richness that far exceeds its actual cost.

The second stage of the plan introduces additional comforts, each with its own wise economy: the graceful bench that takes the place of a love seat, yet consumes far less space and less money; the combination table-floor lamp that supplies the two chairs with both a reading light and a place to park ashtrays and drinks; the glowing rug that substitutes the impact of color—H&G's Raspberry—for the costlier luxury of wall-to-wall carpeting. (A practical bonus: The rug can be rotated so that it will wear evenly.) The third stage marks the acquisition of the piano—an elegant spinet that suits the room and completes the bookcase wall.

From the start, it is color that ties the whole room together. The brilliant stripings of H&G's Mandarin Orange, Peony Pink and light Raspberry echoed by solid colors on the chairs and bench provide a big splash at a very small outlay, for the fabric is easy-on-the-budget polished cotton. It is used for zip-off slipcovers that not only protect the upholstery—but also offer a means of periodic refreshment. A second set in a different combination of colors might be included in the agenda for the second or third stage of furnishing so that the whole mood of the room can be changed with the seasons.

The window treatment that adds so much individuality to the room is a simple do-it-yourself proposition: lengths of fabric attached to standard window-shade rollers. You follow the stripes of the fabric to cut out the keyholes at the bottom, and you leave the ends of the hems open so that 1-inch brass curtain rods can be slipped through them to hold the shades taut.

Lining the bookcases with Mandarin Orange burlap is another touch you could carry out yourself. Start with heavy pieces of cardboard cut to fit exactly the spaces between the shelves. Then cover panels with adhesive-backed burlap that comes in rolls and can be smoothed on as easily as adhesive-backed plastic sheeting. You might use a different color on the backs of the panels, and switch them when you change the color scheme of the room.

In this living room to be enjoyed day in, day out, one of the most important ingredients is the painting which might be tried out on a rental basis during the first stage of furnishing. Then, it could be paid for gradually while the living room around it takes final shape.

What a kitchen planner can do for you Professional training and talents can work magic in making over your kitchen-or designing one for your new house

Kitchen planning has become a highly skilled profession. Such problems as intricate wiring, old-fashioned plumbing and awkward structural details all contribute to the complexities of modernizing an out-of-date kitchen. And to cope with these, along with designing an efficient layout of equipment and an inviting color scheme, might well call for the combined services of an architect, an electrical engineer, a home economist and a decorator. The nearest you will come to finding all four talents in one person is the kitchen planner. Whether you are remodeling your old kitchen or planning the kitchen for a new house, a professional kitchen planner can help you make the best possible use of space, select the equipment best designed to meet your particular needs and incorporate other facilities in accordance with your special pattern of living and the number, ages and habits of your children. But kitchen planners are the first to admit that they could no more create the ideal kitchen for your family without your help than a doctor could prescribe from a photograph. The kind of help you should be prepared to give them is outlined on page 194. Here and on the next five pages you will see how kitchen planners worked with four families to adapt storage space to specific family needs, organize kitchen chaos into convenient work and entertaining centers and integrate, convert or camouflage structural irregularities. Each kitchen, in addition to its efficient basic plan, bears a definite family resemblance—a reflection of the habits, hobbies, and personal preferences of the family who live and work in it.

Island snack bar with range top fills space formerly wasted

or a party-prone family like the Henry Valentines of South Pasadena, Calif., the departmental arrangement of facilities for various activities is a major kitchen asset. The plan, right, of the kitchen remodeled for them by kitchen planners Ralph and Jane Bonnell includes a baking center with two double wall ovens, a barbecue, dishwashing area and a food storage area with freezer and refrigerator. In what was previously waste space, an island range and snack bar is now a pivotal point within easy range of all other work areas; the breakfast area, formerly closed off with a swinging door, is now an integral part of the kitchen. At that end of the room the two Valentine boys can barbecue hamburgers while preparations for a more formal party proceed unhampered in other parts of the kitchen. To absorb clatter: acoustical ceiling, resilient tile floor.

Kitchen cabinets of cherry veneer echo solid cherry paneling of dining area, give the kitchen a welcome warmth.

Vividly painted shutter doors brighten the windowless bar area.

For a large growing family: a step-saving U-shaped plan

he step-saving advantages of a small kitchen and the pleasant atmosphere of a large one are neatly combined in the kitchen that was remodeled for Mr. and Mrs. Elmer B. Howell Jr., of Darien, Conn., by kitchen planner Bette Sanford. Working facilities are concentrated in the U-shaped arrangement at one end of the room (see plan below), but above counter level this section is completely open to the family dining area at the other end. The free arm of the U containing the range top helps to discourage unnecessary kitchen traffic-an important consideration in a household that includes five children ranging in age from 6 months to 15 years. The sanctity of the kitchen proper is also preserved by the location of the bar in a separate area with its own sink and cabinets in the passage between kitchen and dining room. Cabinets throughout kitchen are raised well off floor in order to clear existing baseboard heating units. Storage, carefully organized to serve each work center, includes enough space near dishwasher for two sets of dishes (to allow for once-a-day dishwashing); hooks attached to range hood for hanging pans; a big stainless steel refrigerator of the type ordinarily sold for commercial use.

For a household with a maid: a kitchen to give her privacy

he efficient triangular placement of refrigerator, range and sink simplifies work for a full-time maid in the E. B. Osborn's Bronxville, N. Y., kitchen remodeled by kitchen planner Bette Sanford. Yet the room is big enough (see plan) to accommodate extra helpers for large parties which are frequent in a household with a son and Maid's root daughter of college age. While the kitchen is sufficiently secluded to allow the cook to work undisturbed, it is also an invitingly decorated room where the family can bring guests for late evening snacks. The cooking wall is lined with a combination of old brick, chipped for added texture, and clinker brick. Bright marigold curtains accent the predominantly black-and-white counterpoint of slate countertops, fruit-patterned wallpaper, vinyl-covered floor. Above cooking counter a false beam fabricated from old chestnut boards hides a ventilating duct, also adds to the kitchen's country flavor. The metal cabinets used in the old kitchen were painted and grained to match the new maple cabinets that were stained to resemble fruitwood.

he peninsula range is the key to this kitchen designed for a new house by Bette Sanford, who worked along with the architect from the preliminary planning stage. Two people can cook at the same time, since each has easy access to the range controls built into the base of the condiment cabinet at one end. Under-range cabinets can be opened from either side. There is copious counter space where the children of the family-four of them aged 9 to 16-also can work comfortably at their assigned tasks (see plan). Pass-through counter at left of range top doubles as a party bar. Effective illumination is provided by recessed ceiling fixtures, lamps concealed under range hood and upper cabinets, an up-and-down wall lamp and hanging lamp, both of brushed aluminum.

H&G heralds the welcome revival of a vital tradition in American design:

The NEWPORT

STYLE

What inspired it
How you recognize it
Why it has endured reads the newspapers or rides the Shore Line to Boston can very well escape knowing there is a naval training station at Newport, R. I. (The Naval War College has been there since 1884.) And most Americans over twenty-one are familiar with the erstwhile image of Newport as the most opulent, most fashionable, most socially elevated summer resort in the country. (Americans under twenty-one are more apt to connect the place with jazz.) But the impressiveness of military Newport and the grandeur of social Newport have tended to push old Newport, with its rich heritage of architecture and distinctively American furniture design, into the obscurity of the past.

In Newport, you will find more pre-Revolutionary buildings—about 300—than in any other community in the U.S. Newport-made furniture has been treasured for generations by families spread from Connecticut and upstate New York to the islands of the Caribbean. Yet the birthplace of this important design tradition is sliding into decay—or it was, until the Preservation Society of Newport County dedicated itself to reversing the trend and giving the masterpieces of Colonial designers and craftsmen the care and attention they deserve.

Just what accounts for the flourishing of creative design at a given place and period is sometimes a mystery, but the answer is often found in seemingly irrelevant circumstances. Geography, for instance, had a lot to do with the economic and cultural development of Newport. Newport County is an island—the original Rhode Island—at the entrance of Narragansett Bay, and Newport's harbor was one of the finest in the American Colonies—"so near the Sea," wrote a contemporary chronicler, "that vessels are out or in, in a Moment." Ocean-going brigs could sail right up to the wharves jutting out from Water Street and unload their cargoes "without the help of Lighters"—a convenience which naturally fostered the great maritime trade that made Newport, by the mid-eighteenth century, the fifth largest city in the Colonies.

Unfortunately, the fine harbor was equally inviting to British warships. In 1776, the King's Navy took possession of the island, and British forces were quartered there for three years—a disaster that brought an end to Newport's golden age. The city never wholly regained its eminence as a shipping center. And being on an island it was by-passed by the railroads and the industrialization of the nineteenth century.

Newport was (and is) endowed with a benign climate. Bishop Berkeley, the famous Irish philosopher who spent four years there more or less by accident, compared it to northern Italy, though he may have revised his comparison after the harbor froze over in the winter of 1729-30. But for years on end, the harbor did not freeze, and the breezes in summer began to attract affluent visitors from the South as early as the Seventeen Thirties.

Newport's spiritual and intellectual climate was likewise exceptional. The island had been settled by nonconformists—Baptists chased out of Massachusetts, Quakers whose ears had been cut off by righteous Puritans, Jews from Curação, Spain and Portugal fleeing the Inquisition. Religious freedom or (Continued on next page) "Soul Liberty" had been a basic tenet of Rhode Island's government from the start—likewise freedom of speech. But according to Newport legend, the local religious refugees had been prosperous materially and well-educated—a cut above their neighbors at Providence Plantations and Massachusetts Bay. ("My forebears arrived on this island with their Latin and Greek books," a Newport lady told us archly.) This may have given the Newporters a head start in coping with the exigencies of Colonial living.

ll these varied blessings combined to make Newport, by the second third of the eighteenth century, a lively, cultivated city, labeled by one euphemistic historian "the Athens of the New World." Baptists, Quakers, Jews and more recently arrived Church-of-Englanders were amassing fortunes from the molasses-rum-and-slave trade as well as from privateering and hoodwinking the King's customs collectors-all of which were looked upon as unquestionably respectable enterprises. And the money these merchant princes made, they knew how to spend, both individually and collectively. They commissioned fine churches and public buildings. They built elegant houses, ordered specially made furniture, imported tropical plants for their gardens. (For a contemporary descendant of one of these, see page 160.) Their openhanded hospitality and sumptuous parties were talked about from Boston to Antigua. They supported theatrical troupes, formed a society "for the Promotion of Knowledge and Virtue by a Free Conversation," collected paintings, founded a library of 1,300 books. It would be hard to imagine an atmosphere more favorable to the flowering of architecture and design.

During the eighteenth century there were two kinds of designers: carpenters or "housewrights" who took the trouble to draw up plans before they started to build, and gentlemenamateurs who designed buildings as a cultivated hobby. Both are represented by the two big names of Colonial Newport architecture: Richard Munday and Peter Harrison. It was Richard Munday, carpenter, who built Trinity Church with its wineglass pulpit and paneled box pews (each cushioned and upholstered according to the individual taste of the pew holder). Munday also built Colony House, Newport's civic building graced with a beautiful balustraded balcony and a handsome second-story doorway topped by a broken pediment. Historians assume he must have designed a number of houses, too-including possibly the flamboyant Colonel Malbone's $100,000 country house that burned down in 1776 during a dinner party. (The Colonel, they claim, coolly ordered dinner to be transported to another building, saying, "If I have lost my house, that is no reason why we should lose our dinners.") eter Harrison, who arrived in Newport from England in 1738, was a young man possessed of many talents and an impressive library of architectural books. He introduced the Palladian revival style to Newport and is credited with the Doric temple design of the Redwood Library built in 1748-50, some forty years before Thomas Jefferson began his Palladian-Greek temples in Virginia. This extraordinary building was constructed of wood, then coated with sand and painted to resemble stone. The same finish was used on a charming octagonal summer house designed by Harrison for the country place of Abraham Redwood, the merchant-bibliophile who gave the money for the library's original collection of books. Harrison was also the designer of the famous Touro Synagogue, the oldest in the U.S., and the Brick Market (so-called because bricks were uncommon in Newport-it was built to house a granary and shops).

These two men, along with other designer-builders, planted in Newport an architectural style with a distinct flavor-exuberantly baroque in Munday's early days, becoming purer under Harrison's classical influence. The streets of Newport were lined (and are dotted still) with gambrel-roofed houses topped by dormers and cupolas and richly embellished with ornamental detail. A favorite ornament was the pineapple, symbol of opulence (specifically, perhaps, of the opulent West Indies). The gateposts of Redwood Library are topped with pineapples, and an intricately carved pineapple punctuates the pediment of the Colony House doorway. The most famous pineapple, possibly, as well as the most famous pediment crown the doorway of the Hunter house (see page 146) which an antiquarian of 100 years ago appraised as "truly elegant and costly . . . [proving] the taste of its former owner and the great superiority of the ancient buildings over the modern."

Several Newport houses were built, like the Redwood Library, of wood, cut and finished to imitate stone. The more prevalent clapboard houses were weathered gray, or painted white, Venetian red, yellow or gray-blue. "All this gives a variety pleasing to the eye," wrote one of Rochambeau's lieutenants when the French forces arrived in 1780.

he interiors of the merchant princes' houses were even more elaborate than the ornamented exteriors. Parlors, dining rooms, even bedrooms were paneled from floor to ceiling. Pilasters with Greek capitals marked the corners or framed the fireplaces. Ceiling cornices were projected and mitered above the windows. Paneled wood blinds folded back into the deep window reveals that embraced generous window seats. The stairways, usually located at the rear of broad central hallways, were lavish with architectural detail. On the wall side they were lined with paneled wainscoting, on the outside with twisted balusters, often of four different designs. In later houses, the landings were often lighted with elegant Palladian windows.

Every room, of course, had its fireplace. Some like those in the Hunter house, were bordered with Dutch Delft tiles and framed by bolection moldings. Others were surmounted by elegant paneling topped with broken pediments, as in the parlor of the Vernon house where the walls were decorated with painted panels of Chinoiserie framed by moldings. Walls not paneled with wood were more often hung with printed canvas or paper which a Newport visitor of 1750 pronounced "very neat."

Making furniture for these elegant interiors kept busy a horde of cabinetmakers. At least sixty-seven have been identified as working in Newport between 1730 and the end of the century, but two names overshadow them all—Townsend and Goddard. These names refer, however, not to two individuals but to a remarkable three-generation Quaker clan. There were fourteen Townsends and six Goddards. They intermarried (one was named Townsend Goddard) and although many of them had individual workrooms, they worked together, shared their tools and handed them down to their sons. According to one theory, all the carved shells that embellish so many of the Townsend-Goddard pieces were chiseled by one man—probably James Townsend, grandson of the original Job Townsend.

When you consider this cooperative manner of working, it is not surprising that antiquarians have turned up only a limited number of pieces actually signed by a Goddard or a Townsend. But these have served as a clear criterion for identifying the Townsend-Goddard style—a style that is uniquely American and uniquely Newport. (For some of its characteristic details, see page 38.)

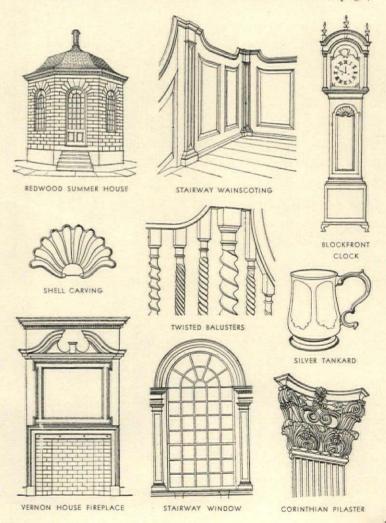

Many a Newport ship owner hauled mahogany logs from Honduras which he commissioned a Townsend or a Goddard to shape into a blockfront chest or a pedimented secretary. But these cabinetmakers did not confine themselves to filling special orders. They were manufacturers as well. To ship captains bound for the southern Colonies and the West Indies they turned over desks, tables and chairs to be disposed of at the best possible prices—promising half the profit as commission. And Townsend-Goddard prices were never cheap. A "common desk" might sell for £10 (about $50), but made-to-order secretaries sometimes cost as much as £330.

Newport on the whole was a very pleasant place to liveeven as late as 1775. Vexations and hard times, of course, had come with the various acts that preceded hostilities at Lexington and Concord. But the hard times might have been survived and ultimately forgotten if it had not been for the arrival of the British Navy. When they moved in, the merchant princes moved out—the patriots to escape the humiliations of British occupation, the loyalists to seek anonymity in New York or comfort in the West Indies. By the time the British moved out, the town was desolate. Its population had shrunk by almost 50 per cent. Half its wharves were gone, and 480 buildings had been destroyed for firewood. Everyone was poor. Almost everyone had to economize for the next several decades. They held on to what they had, made do, made over-which probably accounts for the fact that there are so many seventeenth- and eighteenthcentury houses still standing in Newport today.

nlike Colonial Williamsburg and Sturbridge Village, Newport can never be turned into a museum town. The antique buildings are too numerous and spread over too wide an area. And the great majority of them are still in use for twentieth-century versions of their original purposes. Services are held regularly in Trinity Church and Touro Synagogue. Newporters from eight to eighty traipse in and out of Redwood Library laden with books. Colony House and the Brick Market are centers for civic projects. All of these buildings have been restored, more or less to their original condition, at various times in the past twenty-five years.

Most of the old houses are lived in still. But the Preservation Society has made a study of the land records and construction of almost all of them. After World War II, the Society bought the Hunter house, painstakingly restored it, and every summer for the past seven years has held an exhibition of Newport furniture there. A few other houses have been restored and opened to the public under various auspices.

The Preservation Society, however, is less interested in creating isolated house-museums than in rehabilitating the rundown neighborhoods where so many of the old houses stand shabby and neglected in spite of their still visible beauty. Two years ago, with a grant from the Avalon Foundation, the Society commissioned city planners Christopher Tunnard and Walter de Sales Harris to make a study and recommendations for the rehabilitation of the blighted neighborhoods under governmental auspices—a project which the Society is diligently promoting. Its latest venture is to sponsor reproductions of Newport-made furniture in the Townsend-Goddard style along with fabrics, china and silver that once adorned the opulent homes of "the Quaker grandees of Rhode Island." NEWPORT REPRODUCTIONS

Rare are the reproductions that can hold their own in the company of original designs, or maintain a genuine flavor against a background of venerable architecture. Among these happy few are the Historic Newport Reproductions that the Newport Preservation Society has recently authorized thirteen companies to offer. The knowledgeable eye may be able to detect the difference in age between a 2month-old chair from this new collection and a 200-yearold table standing beside it. But in elegance of design, richness of wood, meticulousness of detail, the two would appear in complete sympathy. This is due partly to the fact that these reproductions are not adaptations but almost exact copies (not very common today), and partly to the excellence of the antiqued finish. The entire collection, which was coordinated by Lamar-Gillette, Ltd., includes more than fifty furniture designs, twenty fabrics and seven wallpapers as well as bedspreads, mirrors, brasses, paints, upholstery trimmings, pictures, ceramic tiles, dishes, silver and candles. On the ground floor of Newport's 200-year-old Brick Market you can see all these reproductions in one display. Here and on the next three pages you will see a representative sampling mingled with Newport antiques in the restored elegance of Newport's Hunter house. Colors and window treatments are authentic, but the furniture for the most part is arranged for the way we like to live today.

In the superbly paneled northeast parlor of the Hunter house four side chairs from the collection of Newport reproductions exhibit the same simple elegance of form as the antique tea table they encircle. (Its webless claw-and-ball feet give away its Newport origin—see page 38.) The walnut chairs are copies of one belonging to the Newport Historical Society, and the mahogany chest between the windows is a reproduction of a chest in the collection of Newport furniture assembled by the Herreshoff family, famous yacht builders. (Typical of Newport: the ogee-bracket feet.) Except for the upholstery fabric-"Newport Blue Homespun"-everything else in the room is antique. To restore the paneling to its original greenish putty color ("Rochambeau green") took painstaking removal of countless coats of paint. This decorative detective work also revealed that the pilasters had been painted to imitate black marble, as they are now, and the little cherubs over the built-in cabinet had been finished in natural flesh tones. The windows have paneled shutters that fold back neatly into the reveals.

The interior of the matching cabinet on the other side of the fireplace reveals extraordinary concern for both esthetic and functional refinement. A pull-out counter provides a resting place for a tray, and the upper shelves curve back to allow room below for tall pitchers and teapots. These shelves are terminated by a pair of marbleized columns, and the top of the cabinet is a large carved shell. The contents, typical of the homeward-bound cargo of Newport ships: English and French porcelains, China export ware. For companies offering Historic Newport Reproductions, see page 37.

Some of the Hunters' guests, we know, ate from these same Chinese export plates and the table must have been set very much as it is here, since everything on it is antique, except for the brass candlesticks belonging to the reproduction collection (and the napkins added by H&G). Surely the guests would also have admired the room's paneling, which was painted to resemble the graining of cedar—a popular form of embellishment in fine Colonial houses. The antique Townsend-Goddard dining chairs with carved ornaments in the center of the crest rails were discovered in upstate New York whence they had been transported by a Newport bride.

possibly the most outstanding single design in the whole collection of Newport reproductions is the secretary copied from the only known piece of furniture bearing the signature of Job Townsend, patriarch of the cabinet-maker clan. The desk interior is embellished with three carved shells and the top drawer has an inside wooden bolt that can be reached only by sliding back a secret panel in the writing surface. Here the desk stands in the back parlor of the Hunter house, surrounded for the most part by Newport reproductions. The roll-arm sofa, copied from one in the Herreshoff collection, is almost 8 feet long and the tea tables (they have exceptionally graceful slipper feet) lend themselves admirably to our modern manner of serving buffet suppers. The wing chair-distinctively Townsend-Goddard in the shaping of its legs and claw-and-ball feet-is an antique recovered in one of the silk damasks in the Newport fabric group.

dainty blue-and-white print, copied from A the jacket of a little girl, one Mary Arnold, decks a four-poster bed which has been reproduced exactly for the Newport group. Serving as night stands are two versatile tables from the collection: a wine table or candlestand with paw feet and a flip-top card table with legs that have the stopped fluting typical of Newport (see page 38). A little bunch of marigolds stands in one of the Delft galley pots (pharmacist's jars) that belonged to the eminent Dr. Hunter, father of the one-time owner for whom the house is named. The rich olive green of the paneling ("Hunter House Dark Green") surrounding the Delft blue of the tiles might well have been the choice of a modern decorator, but it was, in fact, the original paint color.

Newport design takes naturally to the way we live today

Among the surest axioms in decorating are the simple facts that good design is timeless and that good designs-however diverse their originsare always compatible. It should come as no surprise, therefore, that furniture of Townsend-Goddard lineage shows a palpable affinity for modern architecture. The two share a composed simplicity, but the blockfronts, the carved shells and stopped fluting of the furniture supply just enough embellishment to banish any trace of austerity. Here, an assemblage of the Newport reproductions-fabrics and accessories as well as furniture-carry on the Newport tradition in a contemporary house, designed by architect Jack Coble and perched high on a hilltop looking across the island of Newport.

OPPOSITE PAGE

In the living room, top of page, man-size armchairs copied from one in the Herreshoff collection carry out the hearty masculine tone set by the natural stone masonry around the fireplace. The original of the tilt-top tripod table once belonged to the editor of the Newport Mercury founded by Benjamin Franklin's brother and still published. Curtains of "Warren Toile" frame door to terrace. Over fireplace: a Newport landscape by Frank Duncan.

In the guest room, lower left, between a pair of antique painted beds, stands a blockfront chest, reproduction of a famous one signed by John Townsend. Two of the three shells carved on its top drawer are convex; the other is concave. On the beds: reversible spreads in the "Newport Eagle" pattern. Curtains of white polished cotton are trimmed with strips of "Vernon" print. Bed wall is painted "Brenton Blue."

In the dining area, lower right, opposite the fireplace, the table is set with designs that once graced the hospitable boards of Quaker ship owners: English earthenware in "Trade Winds" pattern, "Historic Newport" sterling silver. Napkins are made of "Brick Market Calico"; centerpiece glorifies Newport's favorite motif—the pineapple. Against wall: copy of a Newport sideboard (one of few), showing Hepplewhite influence.

A winsome floral pattern "Noailles," borrowed from a scrap of old fabric, is printed on the sheer batiste that curtains the windows of the master bedroom. Louvered openings over the bed are ventilators for use in stormy weather.

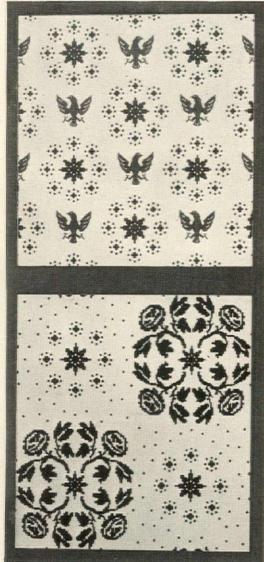

A series of four plastic-coated wallpaper panels—"The Parade in Newport"— covers a screen in the dining area (see also opposite page). Its function: to hid easel and paints since corner doubles as a studio. Extreme simplicity of drop-leaf dining table is modified only by stopped fluting on legs. "Warren Toile" covers back of wing chair copied from one in Hunter house (see page 151).

Wallpapers and fabrics to give your rooms

a Newport flavor

would make charming café curtains or slipcovers.

Old trunks, ancient hatboxes and the faded covers on antique furniture yielded the engaging array of fabric and wallpaper patterns authorized for reproduction as part of the historic Newport collection. Among the varied score of fabrics are pert cotton prints, sturdy reversible matelassés, iridescent taffetas, and elegant silk damasks such as those on the wing chair and the sofa in the informal parlor of the Hunter house (see page 152). Many of the printed fabrics—the sheer batiste on the preceding page, for instance—have companion wallpapers, and almost all would make congenial companions for contemporary furniture. Here is a brief sampling of both wallpapers and fabrics. For more of the latter, please turn to page 215.

Sculptured pineapples to embellish your table settings

Pineapple-embossed teapot, coffee pot, sugar bowl and pitcher ornament a table set for tea in a Newport garden (it belongs to one of the dozens of smaller eighteenth-century houses that line the old streets). The tea set, made from eighteenthcentury molds found in an English pottery, has been put back into production as part of the Newport collection. Accompanying the tea set here: salad plates, cups and saucers of pastel blue stoneware, sterling silver spoons and forks in the "Historic Newport" pattern. The table is covered with "Noailles" printed cotton batiste, laid over a plain white cloth to emphasize the delicate design.

Pineapple candles in a stylized shape reminiscent of the simplified stone pineapples used for gateposts and garden ornaments are the nuclei of twin centerpieces on a table set for dinner in a Newport dining room. Candles stand in crystal compotes banked with short-stemmed blossoms. Plates, tureen and coffee pot (on side table) are the "Trade Winds" pattern with Newport schooner motif in red on off-white. Spoons and forks are "Historic Newport" design.

return to the fabulous, towering centerpieces of the Renaissance was recently heralded by twelve sets of contemporary table decorations in sparkling glass designed by Charles Lin Tissot for Tiffany & Co. These spectacular one-of-a-kind treasures, hand-carved by the famous glass craftsmen of Venice, are composed of many separate parts-crystal trees, plants, hedges, bushes, fountains and statues. You can put them together in a dozen different ways to create enchanting centerpieces for small tables. Or, you can marshal the whole array to form a shimmering, imaginary garden reminiscent of the elaborate landscapes of the sixteenth century. (With each ensemble comes a runner of heavy slubbed silk embroidered with the outlines of the glass components and numbers corresponding to the numbers on their bases.) Here are three delightful ways to use the Gazebo Garden collection.

The complete Gazebo Garden, top, creates a sparkling imaginary landscape in the center of a long table.

Dominating the scene are two gazebos of rose opaline, one at each end, with a tall obelisk of white zanfirico in the center. The other pieces in the garden represent bushes, plants, balustrades, baroque statues and urns. The tall obelisk and four of the statues, bottom, make a gleaming crown for a small table.

Glass plants between the statues vary the scale of the arrangement. And the clear crystal shapes beautifully reflect the vivid blue and green of the straw flowers that surround them on a silver tray.

Left

A single rose opaline gazebo inspires a gay centerpiece for a small informal table. Circling the gazebo are four glass bushes interspersed with fat bouquets of deep pink carnations in old-fashioned glasses.

Pale pink napkins repeat the color of the opaline.

GRIGSBY

The fanciful world of topiary

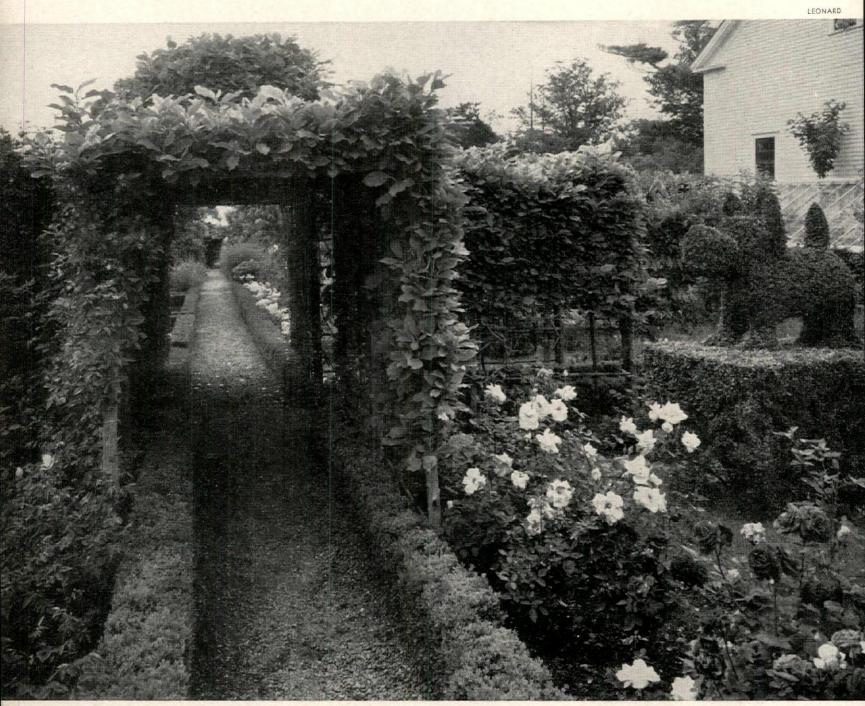

By the peaceful corner, above, where family pets lie buried under sentinel trees, a living rose bush blooms in a clipped green urn.

In the central garden, opposite, wit and beauty meet. With demeanors that express humility, arrogance or simple pride, the Brayton animals have held their places amid box-edged beds of heliotrope and other old-fashioned flowers for six decades. here is no telling where the pursuit of excellence may lead. One of the less predictable destinations is the strange world of topiary—which is characterized by both the substance and the art of pruning living plants in fanciful forms. As a technique, pruning is a normal part of gardening (see page 164). Topiary is sheer virtuosity, beautiful only when, as in Miss Alice Brayton's Newport, R. I., garden, it is accomplished with love and wit as well as skill. Topiary may be a vanishing art, but here it lives, and in these pages we salute it.

SKILLED HANDS SERVE A LOVING EYE

Pruning is no mere tonsorial exercise in the Brayton garden. It is a vocabulary by means of which many related ideas may be expressed. While the terms of topiary gardening are precise (a fortnight's siege with shears and special ladders is required at least twice a year to keep the plants in shape), and while each special effect may be a generation or more in the making, the subject matter of topiary treatment is almost without limit. It ranges from Euclidian stereotypes to plants so free in form you'd swear no hand had touched them.

A wary and impudent dog on a pedestal may seem incongruous beside a bold and luxurious magnolia pleached flat on a cruciform arbor. But the random perfection of roses, paths, trees, vines, even the greenhouse and the barn, link them in one inviting, nostalgic picture.

Animals have traditionally vied with geometric forms for the topiarist's favor. But seldom has so gay and varied a company of both been brought together as in these few acres. Year after year, these carefully tended plants (the figures are chiefly privet, the edges boxwood) withstand wind, rain, snow, even the hurricanes that periodically rake Narragansett Bay. While flowers are seasonally replaced, the many shrubs and trees—fruits, roses and trellised vines—stand as durable monuments to nature's magnanimity and man's perseverance.

As the stand-by menagerie browses its sunny pasture, you are reminded of that old man in the Limerick who said, "now'tis just as I feared; four owls and a hen, two larks and a wren, have all built their nests in my beard."

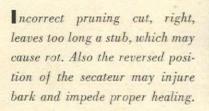

The everyday practice of pruning

Nature may be a great gardener, but she is a miserable pruner. Unfortunately, many people who are expert growers of plants are also miserable pruners. Not everyone who gardens, of course, has the wish, the need or the ability to handle pruning tools as skillfully as Miss Brayton's presiding topiarist (see preceding four pages). But it surely behooves every gardener who has a serious interest in his trees and shrubs to learn, first, just what kinds of pruning should be done, and, second, how to do such pruning himself. Here and on pages 218-219: the what, why and how.

RIGHT AND WRONG WAYS TO MAKE THE PRUNER'S BASIC CUT

Correct pruning cut should accomplish one or more of the following ends: (1) leave a single clean wound that will heal quickly; (2) permit or encourage the most desirable kind of subsequent growth adjacent to or beyond the location of the cut; (3) improve either the form or the vigor of the plant concerned; (4) induce earlier or better production of flowers or fruit; (5) make possible the rejuvenation and rehabilitation of aging plants. Note the close position of the cutting blade.

The family room-kitchen is a second living area

The family room was planned to give the children a place of their own apart from the more formal areas of the house, but it very quickly became a favorite gathering place for the whole family. With the kitchen on one side and the terrace on the other, the room is an all-around living area—for family meals, games or TV-viewing—and the terrace outside is broad enough for dancing and teen-age parties. The family room is partly open to the main living areas (see plan, page 169) and can be used to extend them for parties. But its brick hearth and Scandinavian furniture give it an intimate atmosphere that sets it off as a separate world.

A tall buffet counter that separates the family room from the kitchen is made of teak, forming a handsome background for the dining end of the family room. Table and chairs of a light golden oak match the color of the cedar ceiling. The kitchen is flooded with daylight from the big double skylight, and borrows more light from the family room's glass walls, so that it is marked by the same outdoor feeling as the rest of the house.

A view of the terrace, with its bordering garden thickly planted and graced with a stone lantern, enriches the family room and the kitchen just as the inner court does the other rooms of the house. Beyond the terrace you can see the fence which shields the grounds from the street and the entrance driveway.

Kitchen cabinets of teak and a wall of Italian mosaic tile carry out the use of fine materials that distinguishes the whole house. A huge copper hood covers the whole cooking center—the long stainless steel range top plus the two ovens built into the adjoining wall. The counter in the center of the room is part of a U-shaped work area that includes the sink and the back of the buffet, below. All counters are topped with white plastic.

How to make your own weather everal years ago, the Weather Bureau tried to tell us whether or not we were uncomfortable by adding a Discomfort Index to the daily weather report. The Bureau was rather disappointed to find that the Index didn't seem to apply to everybody. Some of us were perversely comfortable when according to the figures we should not have been. At other times, we were miserable no matter how reassuring the Weatherman was. So the Discomfort Index only served to prove there is no one set of conditions that will make all of us comfortable all the time. In our own homes, however, we can do something about the weather. We can install heating and cooling systems that will produce weather tailor-made to our specifications.

our heating system starts with you. Your body is actually a little heating plant. The food you eat is turned into energy, and energy is heat. Your body radiates this heat into the air and the cooler the air, the faster you lose heat. When the air gets too cold, you lose too much heat and feel chilly. If the air around you is too warm, you do not lose enough heat, become uncomfortable and perspire. What you need is a mechanical system that will regulate the atmosphere around you so that you will lose neither too much heat nor too little.

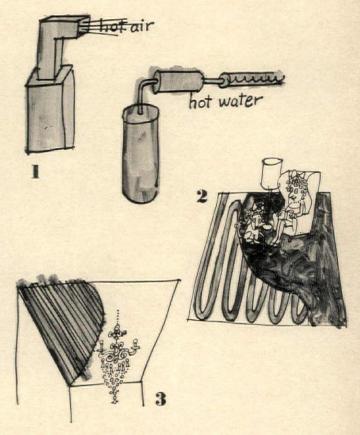

any people think of a heater as a mysterious object down in the basement or in the utility room, which by some incomprehensible magic sends warm (or cool) air to every room. But your heating and cooling equipment is one of the most critical elements in your house and deserves as much understanding and attention as your furniture and decorating. Since the most beautiful colors and fabrics you can find will be wasted on rooms where you freeze and/or shiver, it will pay you to listen carefully to your architect when he starts talking about boilers or ducts.

here are many ways to heat and cool a house. Some are newer than others, but any method will work well if the equipment is well designed. You have a choice of: 1) A furnace that manufactures warm air which is blown through ducts to your rooms. At the end of each duct is a grille, set in the floor or wall, through which the air enters the room. If the ducts are large enough, you can add a house-wide air conditioner that will distribute cold air by the same routes. 2) A boiler that heats water which is forced through pipes into radiators-or circulates through pipes looped back and forth above the ceiling or under the floor. For air conditioning, you can add to the boiler a chiller that will cool the water, and add to the radiators small fans that will cool the air. 3) A system of electric wiring embedded in the ceiling. When the current is turned on, the whole ceiling radiates heat. With this type of heating-and the first two, as well-you can install a separate housewide air conditioner that distributes cool air through an independent duct system, or you can use window air conditioners to cool individual rooms. 4) A heat pump that heats or cools by means of chemicals and distributes the treated air through a system of ducts. Like a refrigerator, the heat pump draws heat from the air, but its action is also reversible.

he thermostat is your liaison with your heating-cooling system. You set it for the temperature you want and it controls the operation of the heater or cooler accordingly. Some thermostats have timers that will start or stop the equipment at specified hours. A single thermostat for the whole house is usually located on an inside wall in a spot that is free from drafts such as an interior hallway. (If stationed in a kitchen or near a frequently used fireplace, a thermostat would order the heating plant to lower its output and the rest of the house would be too cold.) Some houses are divided into zones with separate heating-cooling plants controlled by separate thermostats—a practical plan in houses where some of the rooms, such as bedrooms, need not be heated or cooled all of the time.

are ir you have spent good money to heat or cool leaks out of your house through the walls and around the windows and doors. How fast it escapes depends upon how your house is built. Insulation in ceilings, walls and under floors, insulating glass in doors and windows, weather stripping, storm doors, storm windows, all help to keep the air from sneaking out—and the outside air from sneaking in. The shape of your house and the way it is oriented also has a lot to do with the efficiency of your heating-cooling system. Sunny rooms are easy to heat, and, of course, harder to cool. BASIC BULBS: a baker's dozen for your permanent landscape

These are the best of the hardy spring-flowering bulbs you can plant now and enjoy living with, year in and year out

1 Crocus, one of the most springlike names in the list of perennials, brings yellow, white and blue to a winter-locked garden.

Snowflake (leucojum), its white petals green-spotted, comes in both early and late spring models.

Grape hyacinth, the most ubiquitous blue of spring, multiplies and seeds itself freely.

Spanish bluebell (Scilla hispanica) raises 2-foot spikes of white, pink or blue when most other bulbs are gone.

Crown imperial (Fritillaria imperialis) tops out at 4 feet in red or bright yellow.

The checkered lily, technically known as Fritillaria meleagris, graces springtime woods in white and dappled shades of purple-maroon.

Puschkinia scilloides is a harsh name for a lovely, blue-veined white flower that seldom exceeds 4 inches in height.

Winter aconite, below, opens doubloonsize golden flowers amid rosettes of green just above the level of wintry ground.

Crested iris, not a true bulb but a rhizome, adds blue to April's bulb garden.

Fingernail-size Narcissus Fingernau-size transcription of scaberulus is but one of the priceless yellow miniatures that merit permanent display in some sheltered garden corner. For more information, see page 220.

12 Glory-of-the-snow (chionodoxa) spreads a starry carpet of pink, white or blue across the frosty garden.

WHO BUYS THE LIQUOR IN YOUR HOUSE?

More often than not today,

it is selected by the hostess

BY JAMES A. BEARD

The lovely young woman who sat on my right at dinner inclined her head in my direction and said earnestly, "Mr. Beard, I know that you write about food and wine, and there are some things that puzzle me. Will you tell me the difference between a Martini and a Manhattan?"

This was not a recent conversation. It took place at least twenty years ago, when, in my observation, many women were blissfully unaware of the characteristics of various liquors and wines and of the ingredients of cocktails that are now regarded as "standard."

Times have certainly changed. Much of my dinner conversations with fair companions is now concerned with the merits of stirred Martinis versus Martinis on-therocks, the quality of the last grape harvest in the Burgundy district, or whether hostesses in California serve more Bourbon than Scotch. The questions that come in my direction are now apt to be, "Mr. Beard, what is the best Italian apéritif?" and "Is it true that champagne is the most economical drink to serve at weddings?"

In many households across the country, women have taken over much of the responsibility of deciding what to serve at cocktail time, through dinner and afterward. Liquor and wines have become budgeted household items, as they have been for many years in European homes.

Not so long ago, the actual purchase of liquor was strictly the prerogative of the American male. Women seldom entered liquor stores, and when they did, they entered rather surreptitiously. They tended to sneak in-and out. Now, several surveys of American buying habits have found that more than one-third of the customers in liquor stores are women. For the most part, they seem composed and have the same confidence in their own judgment about liquors as they have in their judgment about foods. In 60 per cent of the families that read House & Garden, women either select and buy the alcoholic beverages themselves or jointly with their husbands.

The survey experts also tell us that about 70 per cent of the families reading House & Garden serve wine with dinner either occasionally or frequently. Here again, it's usually the lady of the house who decides what wine shall be served or settles the question with her husband. I venture to say this is quite a different pattern than that of even ten years ago.

Why is feminine judgment being exercised more and more in the selection and purchase of wines and liquors? Some observers of the American scene believe that women began to take a more active role during World War II years, when so many men were away from home. But I'm inclined to believe that the reasons are deeper and more varied.

The strict beliefs of the Puritan sects are part of our American heritage, and their dislike of alcoholic beverages, plus the years of prohibition, created social taboos that were not easily disregarded. Of course, men were often exempt from the taboo on alcohol—it was more or less taken for granted that we could go out for "a drink with the boys." But "nice" women just didn't drink. They admitted only to an occasional hot toddy to cure a head cold.

Today's new mores

The emergence of the American career girl and the increasing prominence of women in public life have contributed to bringing women into full partnership with men in the gentle art of selecting wine and other alcoholic drinks.

The feminine influence is also strong in the constantly growing American interest in the "good life." We have been a long time coming around to it, but more and more families now realize that alcoholic beverages, judiciously used and tastefully served, are an indispensable part of hospitality. It has always seemed to me that women have more sensitive perception than men when it comes to matters of personal taste and preference. Whereas John-the-husband may believe that everybody at the party will be satisfied with a shot of whiskey on-the-rocks, it's Mary-the-wife who knows that some of the guests may really prefer wine instead of liquor, or mildly sweet cocktails instead of dry. Of course, many men are excellent and sensitive hosts. But so often it's the woman who knows that true hospitality involves accommodating oneself to the preferences of other people.

And so, in a multitude of homes, we now see the pleasant phenomenon of the well-stocked liquor cabinet or home bar. It contains a judicious selection of good Scotch and Bourbon; gin and the makings of the almost endless list of gin drinks-tall and short, sweet and dry; apéritif wines, such as sherry; along with at least one fine Cognac and a choice of after-dinner liqueurs.

Cooking with wine

I think it is a remarkable and most encouraging fact that, according to survey findings, almost three out of four families that read House & Garden use wine in cooking, frequently or occasionally. Americans have been remiss in their enjoyment of wine cookery, which, of course, is one of the great achievements of the French cuisine. There is an affinity between food and wine that attains its culminating glory in the cooking pot. But if I may repeat myself, we Americans must disabuse ourselves of the notion that there is something called a "cooking wine" that is separate and distinct from the wine that is served for drinking. This just isn't so. The wine you drink is the wine with which you should cook. This doesn't mean that a precious bottle of a great Bordeaux, aged with tender care in a cool cellar, should be poured into the stew. But in general terms, cooking with wine is a means of enhancing flavor, and flavor is enhanced only if the wine you cook with is good.

Another influence on the increasing knowledge and interest of Americans in alcoholic beverages is that they are traveling more and are eating in restaurants more than ever before. Often it is the wife, as a prospective hostess, who is curious about the unusual drinks on the wine list. Many Americans who travel abroad acquire pleasant European customs of drinking wine and brandy. European travel has made an especially strong impact on feminine tastes, which tend generally to favor the lighter and milder alcoholic beverages.

Recently, some friends of mine toured France, where for the first time they consistently drank wine with meals instead of water or milk. But on their return to this country it was the wife, not the husband, who gleefully discovered that the local liquor store had a wide selection of French wines and many superb American wines-a collection that actually was superior to that available in France. Now it is exciting, even glamorous, to dine with this enthusiastic young couple.

We seem to be entering an era in which American families will serve a greater variety of alcoholic beverages, and will serve them with much more imagination and with more deference to individual preferences. Liquor today is served less to "loosen up the party" than to give enjoyment with its taste and to blend with the food. The happy result is a friendly relaxed atmosphere. And I am convinced that the home where the husband and wife plan the food and drink together is the home that exudes the warmest hospitality. If today we are bowing to feminine tastes, let's make the most of it. The trend is right.

CAN A TRADITIONAL HOUSE MEET TODAY'S NEEDS?

EDITOR'S NOTE: For an expert appraisal of traditional house design, H&G consulted two distinguished architects who for many years have drawn upon traditional concepts in creating outstanding houses. Jerome Cerny, Lake Forest, Ill., is widely known for the dozens of fine country houses he has designed for families in all sections of the country. Several of his houses have appeared in H&G. Newton P. Bevin, New York City, in addition to his long experience as a designer of town and country houses, has had an instrumental role in redeveloping Washington, Conn., after that small town was virtually gutted by floods in 1955. As architect, Mr. Bevin helped relocate, restore or design anew numerous public and commercial buildings, all of which are Colonial in character.

What are the qualities that make a house "traditional"?

A well-designed traditional house expresses certain esthetic and human values that have remained essentially unchanged for many generations. Whether a house was built in the seventeenth century or last year, there are several basic criteria by which you can judge good traditional design. For instance:

1. Tradition stresses the importance of finely proportioned rooms. Despite widespread prejudice to the contrary, the best traditional houses have always been built to gratify human needs. The rooms have proportions that inspire a sense of appropriateness, a sense of dignity. In such a traditional room, you will feel neither lost in a vacuum nor cramped in a capsule.

2. Tradition requires a rather faithful adherence to the building materials responsible for the shapes and forms that make a traditional house admirable. Inevitably, there is an abrupt break with tradition when modern products are inappropriately substituted for age-old materials.

Tradition also calls for authentic details. If cornices, moldings and other millwork are drastically scaled down or eliminated, much of the classic appeal of traditional design may be sacrificed.

Is there a place in traditional house design for individuality?

In some respects, there is more chance for a family to express its personality than in a contemporary house. "The contemporary architect tends to take command of a family's problems," claims Jerome Cerny. "People who choose contemporary design often have to be led. Traditional, however, presents a familiar setting in which one can express himself."

Newton Bevin observes that in a severe and sophisticated modern setting you may be extremely limited in choosing furniture and art objects that will not upset or detract from the disciplined and orderly architectural mood. "In addition to the main rooms of a traditional house, the kitchen and bathrooms can also reflect considerable individuality. An old farm kitchen can look well during preparations for a dinner party, but a sleek modern kitchen looks terrible when it is cluttered with pots and pans."

Can a traditional house have a contemporary plan?

Yes, within reasonable limitations. Major living areas can be oriented so that they open to terraces and gardens. Zoning can separate parents' and children's domains, both in single- or two-story houses. Even interior courtyards can be incorporated in traditional houses. All-out open planning, however, is a purely modern concept—all but impossible to reconcile with a traditional houses.

HOW TO WORK WITH A KITCHEN PLANNER

The more information you give your professional advisor, the more satisfaction you will get from your new kitchen

The world's most perfect kitchen would be somewhat less than perfect for you if it did not take into account the way you like to work, the way you like to serve meals and entertain your friends and the way your family likes to live. If you hate to-yet have to-cook, you may want a kitchen so functional that you can complete your culinary duties with a minimum of time and effort. On the other hand, if cooking is a pleasure, or if you just like the warmth of a kitchen atmosphere, you probably will want a room that invites you, your family and your friends to linger awhile. Professional advisors are prepared to consider all these things when planning your kitchen, but before you consult one, it is not only desirable but essential to pinpoint all your requirements and decide on your preferences.

Today you have a choice of three types of kitchen planning services:

1. The recommendations of a kitchen planner who operates freely within the entire kitchen equipment field, selecting from new equipment, as well as from standard, whatever will best meet your particular needs. This type of kitchen planner usually charges a fixed percentage of the entire cost of the new kitchen—a portion of which is payable at the initial consultation. There is often an extra charge for the supervision of workmen—an additional percentage of the total cost, or a fixed rate per hour.

2. The advice of a kitchen planner who works with a number of kitchen equipment manufacturers, but whose design fee (like that of a decorator) comes from the difference between the wholesale and retail prices. Preliminary sketches may be submitted without charge, or there may be a fixed hourly rate for consultation.

3. Kitchen planning services offered by manufacturers or dealers (including retail stores) which cover only the particular equipment they make or sell. Ideas and rough sketches usually are provided without charge. But, if detailed plans and/or blueprints are desired, there usually is a charge which is deductible from the final price of the new equipment.

When you consult a kitchen planner for the first time, you should be armed with:

1. Blueprints of your house (which may save time and money by quickly revealing architectural assets or handicaps).

2. A proposed budget. (If you are remodeling an old kitchen, bear in mind that structural changes and removal of old equipment will raise the cost to about double that of a kitchen with comparable facilities in a new house.)

You should also be prepared to answer the following questions:

1. What style of kitchen do you want? A functional kitchen planned primarily for saving steps or ease of cleaning? A warm country-style kitchen that invites the family to share work as well as leisure? An imaginative party kitchen where you will enjoy taking your guests for late snacks or even to lend a hand with meal preparation?

2. What are your kitchen decorating preferences? Natural wood tones? Lots of color—or a predominance of neutrals? Warm or cool colors? Vivid hues or muted tones?

3. How big is your family? What is the age and sex of each member? Are your children at home, in school or living away from home? Do you have any pets? How many? What type?

4. What are your food buying habits? Do you shop once a week or every day? What kind of food do you buy in largest quantities—frozen, canned, dried or fresh?

5. What is your dining schedule? Are your meals regular or irregular? Does the whole family dine together—or the children separately? Are meals usually large or light?

6. What other jobs, besides cooking, do you like to do in the Continued on page 196

A NEW RANGE TO KEEP YOUR KITCHEN ODOR-FREE

Fumes, vapors, smoke and heat are banished right at the source by a built-in ventilator

Modern design and the introduction of color made our kitchens infinitely more attractive to look at; but we did not begin to enjoy them to the full until ventilating experts cleared the air of odors and vapors. In fact, it was only the advent of proper ventilation that made it possible to integrate the kitchen with the living areas, rather than to keep it a room apart. Kitchen ventilation has now taken still another step forward. The ventilator, instead of being a separate device placed over the range, has become part of the stove itself and closer to the major source of odor. Applying knowledge and experience gained in the commercial restaurant ventilation field, Jenn-Air Products Company, Inc., has developed for houses an air-conditioned component range that needs no separate ventilator. Thus, you can use this wall oven and cooking top where installation of a hood would not be feasible.

Built-in vent along the edge of the open range cover automatically sucks in fumes, vapors and heat before they can taint the clean kitchen air. A simple duct system travels down back of range, beneath the floor and outdoors.

kitchen? Laundry, sewing, menu

7. What hobbies might be pursued in the kitchen? Indoor gardening, flower arranging, painting? Do you like to listen to music while you work?

8. Do you want a small second kitchen? Perhaps in the family room, near the nursery, in the pool house or by the pool?

9. What kind of a cook are you? Do you like to be in the kitchen as little as possible—or to spend hours preparing gourmet dishes for your family and friends? Do you prefer to cook in privacy—or would you rather have company?

10. Do you have servants? Occasionally or regularly? Do they live in or come in by the day?

To help you crystallize your ideas you might find it helpful to study photographs of kitchens as well as the kitchen displays at your local utility company, building supply company, department stores or kitchen equipment dealers. In some of the major cities, there are building supply centers (such as the Architects Sample Display Rooms in New York) that have complete model kitchens on display.

Here are some points to consider when it comes to selecting equipment:

1. Do you want gas or electric appliances—or a combination of both? Do you have enough power available for additional electrical equipment? Are your kitchen circuits separate from those for the rest of the house?

2. What new equipment do you want to buy? Range? Ovens? Refrigerator? Freezer? Sinks?

3. What special equipment would you like to have in your new kitchen? Barbecue? Dishwasher? Garbage disposal? Separate surface cooking units? Small appliance center? Wall ovens? Warming ovens?

4. What size refrigerator and freezer do you need? One with extra room for toddlers' milk, for teen-agers' snacks, for a constant supply of party extras?

5. How many surface units and ovens do you need? Is there more than one cook in your family? Do you entertain a great deal? Does a variety of cooking, baking and food preparation go on at the same time?

6. How many sinks do you need? Do you prefer a double or single bowl? Do you have a dishwasher? Would you like a bar sink? Would you like a separate sink for flower arranging? Would you like a sit-down sink?

7. What type of kitchen cabinets do you prefer? Wood or steel? Do you want them to match or blend with your present cabinets? Do you want them to harmonize with the decoration of an adjoining room?

8. What countertop material do you prefer? Ceramic tile or mosaic, plastic laminate, slate, stainless steel? Would you like a marble insert for rolling pastry, or a wood block for chopping?

On the second visit, your kitchen planner will probably present several different plans for discussion-each plan designed to meet your specific requirements. Out of this discussion will come a more detailed working plan. The kitchen planner will also submit samples and suggestions to help you make a final decision on colors, equipment and materials. At this point, you will receive careful estimates of the cost. As your plan takes shape, the result of your selfexamination and intelligent cooperation with your kitchen planner will begin to reveal itself in a kitchen that will be a pleasure to work in and a delight to live in.

A family-sized griddle fits over the two thermostatically controlled heating elements on the cooking top. Raised cover containing ventilator also becomes a splash guard to protect walls and cabinets. Additional easy-clean features: removable grease-guard ledge below vent and lift-out aluminum reflector pans under the four high-speed, removable cooking elements.

A shallow brow over the door is the only projection required for the built-in fumeand-odor-control system of the air-conditioned oven. The ventilating system eliminates smoke, heat and odors right at the source, either for opendoor broiling or for closeddoor baking and roasting. The stainless steel window-door is removable for easy cleaning.

Stainless steel cover provides a handy work surface when cooking top is not in use. Safety asset in a house with children: All power is automatically disconnected when the cover is down.

DECORATING WITH PICTURES

by Dede Driscoll

Pictures are to the home what spice is to cooking. They accent your color scheme, they give character to a room and add dimension and depth to otherwise monotonously flat wall surfaces. While the selection and placement of wall decorations is a highly individual matter reflecting the taste of the homemaker, these basic guide posts can help you in decorating:

RULE 1. USE PICTURES THROUGH-OUT THE HOME, NOT JUST IN THE LIVING ROOM

A row of prints down a hallway or descending alongside a staircase adds new dimension and interest to those usually neglected areas; prints on bedroom walls help make mornings a little brighter; nurseries seem more cheerful with imaginative and colorful plaques; and kitchens are pleasantly transformed by still-life groupings.

Rule 2. Arrange your pictures in decorative groupings of two, three, four or more day's furniture. A square grouping of four prints has far more interest than a single picture hung in the same area.

RULE 3. BE INVENTIVE AND ALERT TO NEW DECORATING IDEAS

For instance, new "raised surface" pictures (called Dimension III) have an added depth and realism that sets them apart from ordinary flat prints. A new process that molds and models the print's surface gives dramatic Dimension III pictures an interesting 3-dimensional realism. Beautifully framed, Dimension III Raised Surface Pictures sell for about $2.98 each at better variety stores everywhere.

have been crowded into the available space; hundreds of people pack the windows and the roof-tops. There is only moonlight and the flare of pinewood torches. The play begins. The ancient dialogue, spoken in Catalan, revives the events of Thursday night in the Passion of Christ. It is impossible to follow the dialect, but here is one case where, I hope, we have all read the book.

The arrest in the garden, the trial before Gaiphas, the appeal to Pilate, the dream of Pilate's wife, the condemnation and the departure of Christ carrying His cross are repeated in the market place of Verges with sincere intensity. As the story unfolded under the paschal moon, I felt that it must really have been like this that night in Jerusalem.

I have said that the actors are local people of the village. They are Catalans, therefore of a Mediterranean race going back to Iberian and Phoenician times. Dressed in oriental cowls and robes, their dark, mobile faces flashing with every thought and feeling, they were perfect actors for their story. I was especially struck by the fact that the Roman soldiers in their short woolen tunics and their armor of brass and leather never looked like stage extras but like the legionnaires carved on the Roman triumphal arches. I was not surprised when a few days later in the museum of Gerona I saw the tombstone of a Roman centurion of the Second Legion and learned that the entire Legion had been recruited in this immediate vicinity. It is perfectly possible that ancestors of these Verges villagers had, in fact, held the torches at the Crucifixion.

The play starts at about 11 o'clock and proceeds without interruption until after 12 o'clock, when the actor playing the part of Christ picks up an enormous cross and goes out through the streets of the little town, preceded by the guard of Roman soldiers and followed by the rabble. At various street crossings the cortege is met by actors who re-enact with a brief dialogue of verses the pathetic incidents related in the gospels: the meetings with the weeping women of Jerusalem, with Veronica, with his mother, with Simon of Cyrene who helped carry the cross. I recall no street lamps in the streets of Verges, but the procession passes between walls illuminated in the most picturesque way I have ever seen. Each householder has put on the walls a fistful of mud into which, before it Continued on page 203

ditional philosophy which makes personal privacy an essential requisite. Mr. Bevin expresses the traditionalist's point of view in saying, "Open planning is fine for informal living in a vacation house, but one ought to be able to withdraw, to back off behind walls in his permanent home."

Is it more difficult to find a good site for a traditional house?

Yes. The architect who specializes in tradition must work within a quite rigid design framework which prevents him from utilizing an odd, left-over piece of land or a rugged hillside. A traditional house requires a fairly uncomplicated plot that can be meticulously landscaped to show off the house itself, as a jewel in a setting.

How do you find an architect skilled in traditional design?

Despite the popularity of traditional houses, the number of outstanding architects who specialize in this style is declining. For it is a fact that in recent years nearly all schools of architecture have removed most courses in classic design from their curricula. As a consequence, the younger architects who are generally in a position to accept residential commissions seldom are qualified to design a traditional house. Mr. Cerny recommends finding your architect through the practical expedient of canvassing your immediate geographical area for newer houses that reflect qualities you are seeking in your own house.

How can you recognize good traditional design when you see it?

First of all, you must know what you are looking for and, even more important, why you are looking. If traditional appeals to you solely for reasons of sentiment or nostalgia, you run the risk of being misled by the superficial trappings of tradition. But if you appreciate tradition for its enduring qualities of proportion and orderliness, of fine details and careful craftsmanship, you can distinguish the good from the bad with confidence. "It would be a good idea," says Mr. Cerny, "for a family contemplating a traditional house to visit and study some of our great national shrines such as Colonial Williamsburg and Winterthur. The historic houses at these places represent standards of traditional perfection against which presentday houses of a similar nature can be judged."

Is traditional design more costly than contemporary

A number of variables must be taken into account. Geography, for instance, plays a part. A good traditional house can conceivably be less expensive to build than a contemporary house of comparable quality in such areas as New England, certain parts of the South and the Midwest. Where architect-designed contemporary houses predominate, as in California, the Southwest and Florida, traditional generally costs more.

While it is often assumed that elaborate detailing inevitably makes a traditional house more expensive, Mr. Bevin says this is not necessarily true: "Any architect-designed house is tailor-made. A very chic contemporary house with great expanses of glass must be designed and built to absolute perfection. Even the most minor flaws show up readily in a glassy house. In a traditional house, you don't have to achieve such exacting finishes because the interiors do not invite the same close scrutiny.

Can a traditional house be planned for future expansion?

Yes, but not so freely as most good contemporary houses. Although the planning of traditional houses has grown more flexible, the architect must give greater thought to what a future bedroom wing or a converted garage will do to the appearance of the house. He is limited by the changes or additions he can execute within the acceptable boundaries of sound traditional concepts.

Does traditional design insure more or less privacy?

Within a traditional house, personal privacy can be virtually absolute. The traditional-minded believe, perhaps above all else, in doors that can be closed when solitude is desired and solid walls that shut out household noise when peace and quiet are courted. Privacy from the surrounding neighborhood depends in large part on the nature of the site. Unlike contemporary houses, in which blank exterior walls, clerestory windows and skylights can overcome privacy problems, traditional houses must almost always be designed with windows in every room. High shrubbery, trees and sometimes walls can serve as effective screens. But the surest means of ensuring privacy is also an expensive one: a plot that is large enough to eliminate your awareness of the immediate neighborhood.

dries, he sticks a large snail shell. The shells are filled with olive oil and have little tallow-dipped wicks. These strange lanterns are lit and burn for several hours so that the dramatic cortege moves through a world of thousands of tiny flickering lights.

Verges is about thirteen miles from Palamós or twenty from San Feliu de Guixols. One should arrange for seats a day or so ahead; this can be done through your hotel in whatever coastal town you stay. Seats mean wooden benches set out on the market place, so take a warm coat—the spring night is cold.

Good Friday at Gerona

A few miles inland from the Costa Brava, across twenty miles of good mountain road, we find the provincial capital of Gerona. This very beautiful city is as scenic as any in Europe and worth a visit at any time. But it is famous in Spain for the Good Friday night procession of its penitentes.

Gerona's Gothic cathedral, where the procession starts, was endowed with a new façade in the seventeenth century and is most impressive because it is at the top of a flight of over a hundred steps nearly 200 feet wide that descend in an unbroken sweep to a little plaza. Also facing this plaza are the palace of the governor and a castle that looks like an ancient prison.

In the different parishes of Gerona there are twenty or more clubs, known as confraternidades, organized to practice some special form of charity or of devotion. They all meet this one night a year to participate in a fabulous spectacle that seems an explosion of the Spanish soul, torn by its contemplation of suffering and death.

First, a religious ceremony open only to the confraternidades takes place in the cathedral. Then, exactly on the stroke of 10 o'clock, the great doors burst open and the marchers emerge in groups, one after another, each group 100 to 400 strong and wearing robes of its historic colors. Every head is crowned by the tall peaked hat of the penitents with a cloth mask completely covering the face. One realizes that some of these figures are men and some are women, but together the 6,000 masked people, in robes the colors of the rainbow, present dazzling anonymity.

At the bottom of the steps ten or twelve of the strongest men from each confraternity pick up an enormous litter called a paso on which are life-size wooden polychrome figures representing the different episodes of the Passion. Many of these figures, carved with all the pathos of the baroque style, are themselves works of art. On the pasos they are set like jewels among flowers, lights, embroideries. Most of the men are barefoot and a few in each confraternity attach to their ankles heavy chains which clank heavily as they drag them over the cobbles in the long procession that winds through the streets of the city and returns eventually to the cathedral square.

I believe that the color schemes of the confraternity uniforms have grown up over centuries and their harmony is accidental, but they form today as masterly an ensemble as the greatest stage manager could imagine. The Brotherhood of San Isidro in black and olive green, the Confraternity of Silence in white and ultramarine, the Fraternity de la Pasión y Muerte in coal black, the Brotherhood of the Holy Face in black and maroon and half-a-dozen other multi-colored companies have passed before our eyes, when suddenly the 300 penitents of the Confraternity of the Holy Blood, in robes, hoods and masks of unrelieved scarlet, emerge like a burst of thunder from the cathedral and seem not to walk, but to pour like a liquid down the steps.

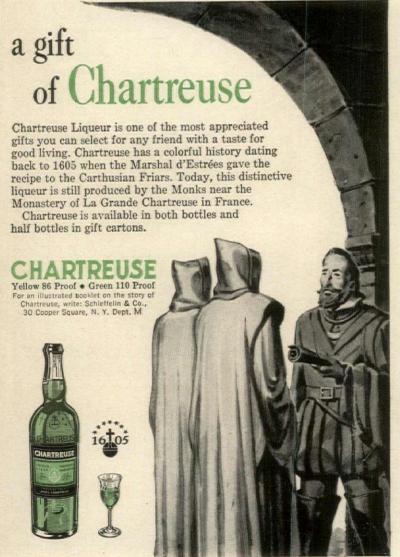

Lastly appear the clergy of the cathedral in black silver-embroidered capes, preceding the tiny stooped figure of the Bishop of Gerona, who is 90 years old but nevertheless follows the whole procession around the city and back to cathedral square. So long was the exit of these thousands from the cathedral that only a few minutes of empty silence elapse before the return of the first confraternity. Each company leaves its unwieldy paso at the bottom of the staircase and takes a designated place upon the steps. When finally the old Bishop returns to climb back up to the cathedral, slowly, but alone and unassisted, the entire enormous staircase is filled with a brilliant rainbow of penitents.

Can you imagine an assembly of 6,000 people in complete silence, so still that you could hear 100 yards away the rustle of the cloth as the Bishop turned to face the crowd? I witnessed it that night at Gerona when a benediction service at the top of the staircase ended the remarkable evening. Then the rainbow suddenly swirled off into a thousand fragments as the penitents headed home through dozens of narrow, arcaded streets.

A Calendar of Festivals

A complete calendar of the fairs, pageants and festivals of Spain would include over 300. Every month of the year would be represented, but naturally the spring and summer events are the most interesting to visitors. Here are some of the most outstanding and their approximate dates.

Holy Week, the week before Easter, is one long spectacle in every cathedral town, but the celebrations in Burgos, Seville, Toledo and El Escorial are especially brilliant.

Ten days after Easter at Seville: the spring fair, most elaborate in the entire country, with bullfights and dances that continue for five days.

May 1 at Barbate (Province of Cadiz): picturesque fiesta of the tuna fishermen; it is at this time of the year that they make their greatest kill.

The first Friday of May at Jaca (Province of Huesca): fiesta commemorating a victory of Christian troops over the Moors in the eighth century.

May 9 to 15 at Lérida: Fiesta of San Anastasio; competition of folk dances, parade of giants and dwarfs.

May 10 to 17 at Madrid: Fiesta of San Isidro; probably the best bullfights of the year.

May 20 to 22 at Ronda (Province of Málaga): fiesta commemorating the capture of Ronda by Ferdinand and Isabella.

May 3° at Aranjuez (Province of Madrid) and La Granja (Segovia): Fiesta of San Ferdinando, with full play of the great fountains in the famous gardens.

Corpus Christi (on June 21, 1962), celebrated in great pomp throughout Spain but especially dramatic at Burgos, where a ballet of altar boys dances through the streets and even in the cathedral during the benediction. There is also great pomp at Seville, Lérida and Saragossa.

June 20 to 23: Fiestas of San Juan celebrating Midsummer's Night. The date was observed in pagan times by burning great bonfires and this is still the tradition—at Les and Isil (Province of Lérida) where pine trees are set afire with ancient Pyrenean rites. At San Pedro Manrique all the young men leap or walk barefooted through the pyre.

July 23 to 31 at Santiago de Compostela: Fiesta of Saint James celebrated at one of the great pilgrimage shrines of medieval Christianity, still one of the greatest ensembles of early medieval architecture.

July 30 to August 15 at Málaga: two weeks of various fairs and festivals commemorating the liberation of the city from the Moors.

August 5 at Espinosa de los Monteros (Province of Burgos): folk dance festival.

August 13 to 15 at Elche (Province of Alicante): presentation of an ancient drama, El Misterio de Elche, in a town that has the only orchards of date palms in Europe. (Under the city, and here and there among the palms, are interesting Roman and Phoenician ruins.)

August 27 at Linares (Province of Jaén): Fiesta of San Augustin; exposition of arts and crafts.

As you see, the Spanish fiesta can be either a religious, folk or historic event. One that is offbeat and all fun is San Fermín's Day at Pamplona. If at one time there were religious or historic associations to this fiesta, they have been quite forgotten by now.

San Fermín's Day at Pamplona

This festival of the bulls is as far as you can get from the profoundly religious events at Verges and Gerona, but it is equally Spanish—picturesque and emotional.

Pamplona is a city of 100,000 in the north of Spain, sixty miles from the Bay of Biscay and from the French frontier. It lies on a green plateau at 1,500 feet altitude, surrounded by high spurs of the Pyrenees, in what was once the ancient Basque kingdom of Navarre. The city was founded by the great Roman general, Pompey, about 75 B.C. (Pamplona is a corruption of his name.)

Pompey's settlement had become a flourishing garrison city 100 years after Christ when a missionary named Saturninus arrived to preach Christianity and to denounce the vices and excesses of the Pamplonans. Naturally, no one paid a great deal of attention and the Roman governor tried to force Saturninus to abjure the new faith, which he refused to do in true early Christian style. So the Romans tied him to the horns of a wild bull and his mangled body breathed its last on the steps of the Temple of Diana. But the governor's own son, whose name was Fermin, was so impressed by the old man's faith and courage that he became the first Christian of Pamplona. Without thinking much of how it all began, Pamplona each year celebrates the name of Fermín for a whole week beginning July 7th and avenges the fate Saturninus in a holocaust

The corrida exists all over Spain; at Pamplona the best animals are chosen from the fiercest breeds and the public is very particular. However, what distinguishes the Fiesta of San Fermín is not the bullfights, which occur every afternoon, but the unique encierro or roundup very early each morning. At 5:45 bands of musicians with horns and kettledrums pass through the streets playing special fanfares called "Dianas" to wake the populace. The bulls for the day have been quartered in the outskirts on the opposite side of town from the arena. A single very narrow street crossing the city has been fenced by boards at all its intersections; balconies and roofs are crowded with spectators.

Suddenly the bulls, maddened by noise and goading, are released from their pens and charge along the narrow way, clear across the city, preceded by hundreds of young men of the town racing madly to avoid the dangerous animals. To escape a pursuing bull, one must handvault across the protective boardings. If a man falls, he must lie still in the dust because the racing bulls will charge over a fallen body without goring, but sometimes there are so many young men that there is not even room to fall, and the bulls in their panic gore or leap over anyone in their way. The spectacle at any given point is all over in a few moments; its dizzy speed, its gratuitous danger, its noise and odor are exciting and even beautiful. If you think your arteries-and nerves-will stand the strain, you can get out and join the race, in which case I advise a pair of welltied espadrilles and the counsels of an experienced Pamplonan.

When the pack reaches the arena, the young men pour into it through a single narrow entry. There the bulls are diverted to their pens and at the same time a dozen or so heifers are released. kicking and prancing and promptly charging at any man who moves. Their horns have been covered with leather to avoid fatal accidents, for the conduct of a heifer is more unpredictable than that of a bull. For an hour the melee continues while our amateur toreros attempt the classic passes of the art with odd squares of red cloth.

A day in Pamplona

After the encierro and the spectacle at the arena, it is about 8 o'clock. Establish yourself on a café terrace for café au lait or chocolate with churros, which are the Spanish version of doughnuts, without the holes. Walk through the streets (I say walk, not run); there is much to see in the way of old churches, some good pictures in the museum, and, outside the walls, a cattle market with gypsy merchants and outdoor kitchens. At 1 o'clock, everyone goes to the toril, which is a wooden labyrinth near the arena, to see the bulls who were in the morning's encierro and who will fight that afternoon. You will then eat peppery sausages and drink sherry in one of the little bars on the Plaza del Castillo, Lunch is at 2:30. The Rev Noble is an elegant restaurant with excellent food. Another place, simpler but always animated and gay, is Doña Blanca de Navarra. After lunch, comes the siesta, which the Spaniards take seriously; all activity ceases until exactly 5:30 when the corrida begins with astonishing precision.

Since the bulls chosen for San Fermin's Day are always of the finest quality, many great toreros come with pleasure to the capital of Navarra. But the real spectacle is in the bleachers. Every townsman belongs to a club called a pena, consisting of fans of this or that bullfighter. Each pena arrives accompanied by an orchestra purposely composed to make the most possible noise and transporting great hampers of sandwiches and demijohns of wine. They all install themselves, one after another, with clashing cymbals and rolling of drums. Always, at some time or another during the bullfights, the whole mob of fans is seized by a collective frenzy, so that a great wind seems to move across the bleachers to the sounds of screams and paso dobles. After the last bull has been killed, all the penas come down into the arena dancing and singing, passing out through the main doors to spend most of the night roaming the streets.

The Fiesta of San Fermin is for the young and adventurous of heart; it is not for the sophisticated. To enjoy it, one must really try to stay in Pamplona two days because the effervescence begins so early and continues so late. Hotel accommodations are limited -La Perla is the best, Clean and pleasant rooms can be reserved in private homes through the tourist office. However, it is perfectly possible to come by car from Biarritz or San Sebastian and return there after dinner.

Upon arriving, the first thing to do is to buy a large red handkerchief and knot it around your throat. (You are not in the swing without your handkerchief.) Otherwise dress conservatively-don't try to be a picturesque tourist. The Basques are a puritan people after their fashion; they dislike men in shorts and, above all, women in pants. Women should have print dresses for the day and light suits for the cool evenings.

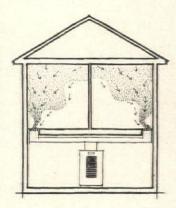

You will probably leave Pamplona with a few souvenirs: colorful botas, which are wine skins made by the Basque shepherds. smooth outside and hairy within; chorizos, the peppery sausages for which you have by now acquired a taste; a necklace of garlic bulbs which you can wear like a lei; alcarrazas, water bottles in the form of a rooster, which make water cool if you set them in the sun. Lastly, you can buy an excellent record to bring home for evenings when you want to relive memories of San Fermin: Toros en Pamplona, Hispa-Vox, H H 10-65.

A heating or cooling system can change the quality of the air as well as the temperature. Into your basic equipment you can incorporate devices that will remove dust and pollen, get rid of smoke and odors, raise or lower the humidity.

Grilles and radiators should not stick out like sore thumbs or be placed where they will limit furniture arrangements or interfere with picture groupings. If you are building a new house, the placement of your heating-cooling outlets should be carefully planned as an integral part of the architecture. If you are installing a hot water system, you can use baseboard radiators designed to resemble moldings, and paint them to match the walls and trim. If you decide on a forced air system, you can center the grilles above doors or under windows and take other steps to make them unobtrusive. For instance:

In a room with paneled walls you can frame the grille to match the paneling around it.

You can use louvered doors to conceal the return air ducts that carry air from the room back to the heating plant.

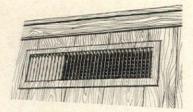

Or you can locate return air ducts over shallow closets, hide them with small louvered doors.

In an older house you can replace ungainly old-fashioned radiators with the newer baseboard type, or you can hide the offenders with perforated metal covers. You can also take steps to make awkwardly placed grilles less conspicuous. For instance:

You can paint grilles to match the surrounding walls, or cover the frames with wallpaper.

You can paint inside of duct behind grille as far back as your hand will reach so that no glint of metal will be visible.

Closed, the lustrous textured cover completely conceals the stainless cooking area, providing additional work surface. At the touch of a button the cover raises to reveal four in-line cooking elements—and becomes a protecting splash guard.

IT'S THE

Air Conditioned Range

Here is an exciting new concept a built-in range-top and oven with self-contained fume control system that keeps your kitchen clean, cool and odor-free...always. Even onions frying in an open skillet leave no detectable odor in the room!

Cabinets can be carried full length across the range in one sweeping, unbroken line. Or perhaps you have a yen for an island or peninsular kitchen design. WHAT'S NEW IN THE WORLD OF MUSIC

A roundup of the latest arrivals and trends in equipment

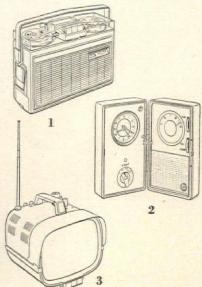

Today's most recent crop of music makers are improved not only in sound—they are better looking. Hi-fi consoles, in various rich woods and finishes, now come in several new types of design, many with trim, separate record cabinets to match. There are slim consoles to mount on a wall, hutch cabinets with speakers at ear level and compact units on casters that can be rolled from room to room. Portable equipment is more compact and lightweight. And many pianos and organs have slimmer legs and cleaner lines to give them a lighter look, and fabric-covered backs to give you more leeway in placing them.

A new type of broadcast to revitalize radio

A big improvement over conventional AM-FM stereo broadcasts is a new type of radio broadcast called stereo FM. (With AM-FM stereo, the AM reception is always somewhat poorer than the FM.) With this method, the two stereo channels of music are broadcast over a single FM wave length, resulting in superbly clear, balanced reception. This fall, many FM stations expect to begin broadcasting these stereo programs. To tune in to stereo FM programs you either need one of the new stereo FM radios, like General Electric's table model with detachable speakers for greater stereo separation, below, or you can convert your present FM set with a gadget called a multiplex adapter. Several manufacturers will have adapters available this fall priced between $30 and $40. Also, many of the new stereo phonograph consoles include stereo FM or FM radios that can easily be converted.

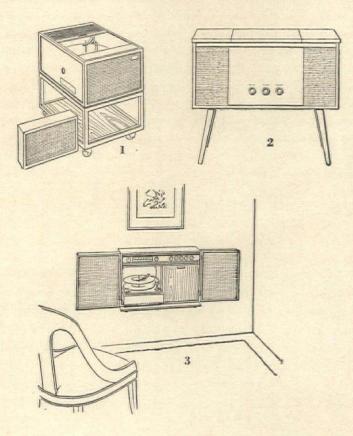

Smaller transistor portables

To keep us entertained in our present-day, footloose way of living, there is a bumper crop of new portable music equipment-all transistorized. For example, left: 1 Norelco's 8pound tape recorder that records up to two hours of material; 2 Toshiba's travel clock radio that folds up neatly for packing-27/8 by 45/8 by 21/8 inches; 3 Sony's TV with 81/2inch screen. Others to look for: Grundig-Majestic's detachable car radio with FM, AM, marine and short-wave; Webcor's 8inch square tape recorder.

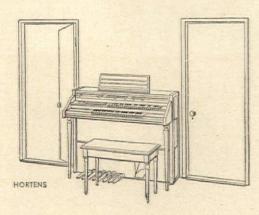

The new versatility of stereo

Even if your room is no larger than a postage stamp, you can enjoy stereo today with new equipment that takes little space yet provides good stereo sound. For example, below: I Pilot's phonograph on wheels that can be rolled easily into any room you want; 2 Voice of Music's compact console with legs that are removable in case you want to install unit on a shelf; 3 General Electric's adaptable cabinet that can be hung on a wall, installed on a shelf or mounted on legs.

Small organs with full-scale capabilities

Organs are getting smaller and neater and at the same time more and more versatile. Many of the new compact models have double manuals and boast the full sound of a large organ, so that you do not find yourself in need of a new organ when you progress beyond a simplified beginner's keyboard. Magnavox has come out with a spinet organ, below, that fits neatly into a small space and is easy for a beginner to learn on as well as a challenge to the more advanced musician. Electro-Voice's new "Series D" organ reproduces actual pipe organ sounds via disks on which the tones are recorded and which play when keys are pressed. Estey offers an economical two-manual organ for under $500.

Speakers in new places, with new faces

Today's hi-fi speakers are appearing in unexpected places and with an unexpected appearance. One of the most startling innovations is in a new line of stereo consoles by Ravenswood, including one in contemporary design (1). The speakers are installed in the back of the cabinet and the sound bounces off the wall behind, distributing the stereo effect evenly throughout the room. This new arrangement of speakers also creates three storage compartments (for records and perhaps a TV) in the front of the cabinet. Radio tuner and controls are installed in pull-out drawers. A new, surprisingly thin (4-inch) speaker by Audax (2) plays music from the front as well as the back. Thus it can be installed in a room divider to provide music for both ends of the room. Other news among speakers: Capehart's wireless stereo remote speakers that contain a tiny rebroadcasting device and can be plugged into any room of the house to pick up music from the main console; RCA's hutch consoles that have speakers installed in top half of each cabinet for ear-level sound; Olympic's new consoles with extension speakers for AM, FM and phonograph—all of which can be used simultaneously in different rooms while you watch TV on main set.

Big change in store for color TV sets

Within the next year or two, color TV sets are expected to get thinner, thanks to a new color tube developed by Motorola. The new picture tube is rectangular instead of round and is several inches shorter as well as much less bulky than current tubes. Thus future color TV sets will be just as slim and space-saving, below, as black-and-white sets.

A simplified type of Austrian shade hangs at the windows of Whitehall, the restored eighteenth-century house where Bishop Berkeley lived.

One of Newport's historic houses suggests an easy-to-make treatment for modern windows

7 indow treatments in sumptuous houses of Colonial Newport tended to be eminently practical. Sometimes the fabrics were imported silks and damasks, but they made up into unfussy curtains or shades that allowed a maximum of light to enter the rooms. One of the most ingenious designs is a simplified Austrian shade at the windows of Whitehall. The shade consists of a flat piece of damask lined with China silk and trimmed on the bottom with fringe. Four vertical tapes on the back divide the width of the shade (which is 9 inches wider than the window, when sides are hemmed) into three equal sections. The top of the shade is pleated evenly and tacked to a board the exact width of the window. (Extra 9 inches allow sections between tapes to fall in folds.) Rings are sewed to the tapes at 6-inch intervals, and four larger rings are screwed to the board at the top of each tape. Silk cords tied to the bottom rings are run up through the others to the top and carried through the large rings to one side of the window, where the end of each cord is weighted with a lead. The two center cords, however, are shorter than the other two so that when all four cords are pulled, the center panel is raised higher than the others, and the whole shade takes on the look of a lambrequin at the top of the window. Such shades would be easy to make of silk or of printed percales such as those below.

NOTES FOR

OCTOBER GARDENERS

The effect of a good garden program, though probably not the intent, is to improve on nature. For example . . .

First Weekend

Placement strategy. When nature drops a seed in a location that is unsuited to the seed's germination or development, that's the end of it. Nobody cares. When a gardener puts a seed or a plant in an unsuitable environment, that's only the beginning-because gardeners invariably care a great deal. If gardeners were as wise or as ruthless as nature, you would never see a good tree growing in the wrong location. It simply wouldn't survive. We recommend a closer study of nature's methods, if not her callousness, now that the rush of fall transplanting is in full spate. Certain broad-leaf evergreens-some hollies and camellias, for two examples-usually grow best when their leaves are shielded from the sun in winter. So you don't put camellias and those hollies to the north of tall trees that lose their leaves in winter. Some plants-verruculosa barberry and nandina, for two old favorites that come readily to mind-may be killed by cold winds and low temperatures, whatever the durability of their foliage. A northwest exposure could be fatal to them in latitudes where a protected spot to the southeast of house walls might keep them in satisfactory growth.

Observation of nature will teach you some of the general principles of the relation of plant hardiness to orientation and terrain, but not all of them-for one all-important reason: Nature does all her planting by means of seeds that germinate where they fall. If there is no germination (or seedling development) there will be no plant at all. What will not sprout will not grow. Gardeners, on the other hand, may sow seeds in specially protected places, then move the living plants to locations that would never support seed germination. In other words, there is usually an enormous difference between the natural range of a species and the horticultural or gardening range. You can assume that there is always an explanation, if not a very logical reason, for a plant's inability to reproduce itself in a given location. And if you can figure out what that reason is, you may have a clue to your chances of getting a growing transplant to live, even though a seed or seedling would fail.

The moral of all this? Survey

The moral of all this? Survey each nook and cranny of your grounds, wet a finger for the prevailing wind, estimate the wind-breaking and sun-impeding characteristics of your trees and your house walls at all seasons, consider the factors that may influence the winter warmth of your soil and, of course, relate the known idiosyncrasies of your plants to the environmental conditions you can or must provide for them. Then, only then, go ahead and plant.

Second Weekend

October's wunderkinder. The proof of your season's pudding is about to be served. The modern chrysanthemum is surely one of the miracle children of the garden world, not alone because it has almost an entire garden season to itself, but because it has brought to the realm of the simple daisy enormous vitality and an unparalleled range of beauty. Yet for all your early-season pains to see that your chrysanthemum plants were kept in rapid growth and full health, you can lose all now if you neglect any one of several details. Watering is one (if you can call that a detail). A drying plant, whatever its earlier luxuriance, will lead to diminished flowering, may leave many unopened buds at season's end. It is late now for disbudding, but not in all cases too late. And if either the appearance of your blooms or your thirst for show ribbons are important to you, disbudding is one of the essential procedures. Sanitation is almost more important now than ever, because the onset of cold weather makes the results of insect and disease attacks on the foliage even more obtrusive. You are scarcely going to be able to improve the foliage of your plants, no matter what you do now. But by continuing your spray program you can at least keep what you have. In addition, you will ensure healthier clumps from which to make cuttings next spring if you keep the plants growing well until winter cuts them down naturally.

Frost protection may be necessary to safeguard good flowers on many of the late varieties and some of the less hardy early ones. But whether you care to undertake the maneuvers necessary to forestall frost is up to you to decide. In our opinion, providing frost protection is in the same category of specialization as shading plants when buds begin to form in order in increase the hours of relative darkness and speed up the opening of the flowers. We make no recommendation, though for your own information, you probably should experiment sometime.

Continuity of attention to seasonal needs is probably no more important to the success of chrysanthemums than to any other garden plant. But not every garden plant requires care from April to November—and no other puts on the unique performance that the chrysanthemum does in its time and place. A little neglect, as Benjamin Franklin pointed out many years ago, breeds mischief.

Third Weekend

Waste not, want not. We have no particular sympathy with the kind of squirrel-mindedness that leads some gardeners to save unused packets of flower and vegetable seeds from season to season. But there is both pleasure and a good deal of harmless satisfaction (maybe profit) in saving the seedlings that spring up beneath both species and varieties of ornamental shrubs. For reasons touched on in the opening paragraph of these notes, many of your best and healthiest bushes will never drop a viable seed, let alone germinate one, but many of them will produce very respectable seedlings. If these seedlings happen to be the progeny of true plant species, they will be identical to the parent plant (or plants). If they are the result of casual cross-pollination between natural varieties or hybrid forms, the seedlings may possess many combinations of inherited characteristics.

So get down on your hands and knees and poke under the evergreen barberries and the Japanese hollies any autumn. Among the leaf litter you will find small seedlings that already may show a wide variety of leaf shapes and sizes. Take with you under the bushes either an old kitchen spoon or a small trowel; have a small basket lined with moist peat moss to receive the seedlings. Several valuable landscape forms of the Japanese holly (Ilex crenata) will cooperate in their own good ways to give you not only replicas of themselves but forms resembling selections you may not have in your garden at all. From beneath the overlapping growth of the straight crenata species and a plant of the convexa variety of crenata, you may find some seedlings that will develop the 11/2inch-long flat leaves of the socalled rotundifolia variety, a very few of the convex-leaved form, several with minute leaves of no more than 3/8-inch length, and many, of course, with leaves of intermediate size. Some leaves will be long and narrow, some wide and short, some glossy, some dull. All will inevitably be evergreen and none will produce any but vellowish flowers and black berries.

The point is not so much which plants produce useful seedlings, but that so many of them do. Go seedling-stalking yourself. All you need is curiosity, patience and a strong pair of knees.

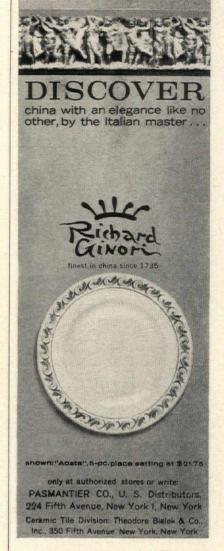

Fourth Weekend

Lever and wheel. The man who invented the wheel and the man who put together the principle of the lever and fulcrum were among the gardener's greatest benefactors. There isn't anything short of a perfect cube that a gardener can't move with a crowbar and a billet of wood. Now that the time of limber muscles and reduced perspiration is upon us, major construction projects may be pleasantly undertaken. Slipped discs being what they are, we recommend the cautious approach. But you will be astonished at the size of the rocks, for instance, you can move if you substitute the laws of physics and common sense for mere weight-lifting. An ordinarily office-bound man can jocky 200pound rocks about with ease using a crowbar and a solid fulcrum to brace it against.

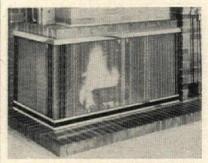

This is not, of course, the place for a lesson in applied physics. It is rather a place to suggest that fall is a good time to rearrange the rock garden. In spring, there is so much else to do, and the soil is so wet, and the plants are so eager to grow that rockwork is out of order.

It may be a pertinent generalization here to add that autumn is invariably a better time to handle earth than spring. In autumn the soil is drier and therefore lighter. It is mellower and therefore easier to dig, mix, spread and smooth. It is warmer, therefore friendlier to newly set plants. It is more crumbly and less lumpy, therefore closer to that "heterogeneous homogeneity" that underlies, literally, our very best gardens.

H&G's GARDENER'S

THE TOOLS AND TACTICS OF GOOD PRUNING

Further details on everyday pruning practices (see page 164)

It is a demonstrable fact that natural pruning cannot compare, in either quality or quantity, with man-made pruning—even that done by an amateur who has only common sense to set against experience. (You have only to go into the woods and look up into the tree branches to see what mayhem nature commits.) It is also an obvious truth that the only kinds of pruning most home owners—even most gardeners—are concerned with are those that either clean up after nature or contribute to the general good looks of landscape plants. The highly special pruning of the orchardist, the berry farmer, or the specialist in any branch of plant production often requires highly special study, as explained later. On your home grounds, shade trees (Continued on page 224)

Tool inventory, starting with the most important snipping devices, includes all the pruning tools used to meet every pruning need of a half-acre property (except electric hedge trimmer). (1) Long-handle lopping shears to cut heavy brush. (2) Heavy leather gloves, essential for thorny work. (3) Knife-cut secateur, best for cleanest pruning cuts. (4) Pocket secateur, to handle light work. (5) Flower shears with "cutand-hold" blades.

Compound-action shears that give extra power for big hands. (7) Regular anvil shears, fine for allround cuts. (8) Treewound paint in handy aerosol can. (9) Hedge shears, notched to hold big branches. (10) Oil can to lubricate all saw blades. (11) Curved saw with reverse teeth, for use on end of long pole (with knifecut pruner). (12) Straight double-edge saw. (13) Compass saw for close work in shrubbery clumps. (14) Heavy saw for trees.

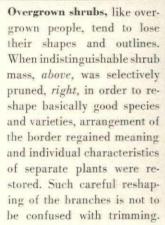

Effective cutting capacities of the secateurs and lopping shears are indicated by actual samples of green wood cut by each tool when held in one-hand grip (except for long-handle pair). For general use, the compound-leverage, anvil-cut pruner (1) is for rough duty, while simple model (4) represents standard. For precise work, knife-cut types (3) and (5) are experts' choice. Heavy-duty loppers (2) will handle 1½-inch green branch. Small cut-and-hold shears (6) are for gathering blossoms.

All the workaday techniques of gardening have been devised for the greater beauty and usefulness of your plants—from starting bulbs to pruning trees

Selective pruning of an overgrown shrubbery border restores the natural beauty of each plant

Pruning for effect is the kind you are most likely to become involved with. Here an overgrown firethorn, above, is cut back severely but carefully to reveal an interesting branch pattern, right. Three transverse aluminum wires hold main branches in place. Later, seasonal pruning will strengthen and improve the pattern as the shrub grows. Basic framework is most important; all later trimming depends upon work done in original steps.

The making of an effective espalier often starts with pruning and reorganizing an uninhibited bush

...to help your trees weather the winter

Fall is the time for a check-up. See whether summer drought, diseases, insects or storms have weakened your priceless trees. A sudden early blizzard could burden your trees with ice. Weakened forks could split, heavy limbs break off beyond repair. Ice on a single twig can weigh as much as 154 times the weight of the twig!

Don't let this happen to your trees! Call a Davey expert for a thorough check-up now. If remedial care is needed, he can cable and strengthen weak forks, brace heavy limbs, provide deep-root feeding and prune. Unless your trees are made vigorous now, they will not provide their full beauty next spring.

Davey trained experts, using the latest techniques and most modern equipment, will get your trees ready for the rigors of winter—in time.

You can grow our basic bulbs true L. vernum is among the very earliest of spring bulbs; the other successfully (and any other hardy bulbs you plant this fall) if you follow a few basic rules. Here they are, without frills: Plant only first-quality bulbs. Plant them in well-dug ground, where underdrainage is good and a reasonably loamy condition exists. Avoid the use of fresh organic fertilizers (manures), lest rotting of bulbs result. Plant all hardy bulbs where some sunlight will strike them every day prior to and during their normal flowering season (the filtered sunlight of spring tree branches is usually acceptable). Plant each bulb right side up at a depth that will leave the top of the bulb about 21/2 times its own height beneath the surface of the ground. Example: the tip of a bulb that is about an inch high should be about 21/2 inches below the level of the planting bed. (But minor departures from this norm are unimportant.) Plant all bulbs as soon as the dealer sends them to you-in any event, before heavy frosts come. Expect about 5 per cent total failures due either to inherent bulb weaknesses or other unaccountable difficulties.

A few more specific observations may be useful if you are unfamiliar with any of our baker's dozen of bulbs that are listed on pages 176 and 177.

1. Crocus is an enormously variable breed, both as to size and color. Choose from a good catalogue or a dealer's display according to taste. Bear in mind that squirrels and chipmunks may like crocuses as well as you do. So be prepared to lose from 10 per cent of your bulbs to as many as 60 per cent in a hungry year. (Field mice also will account for some failures among crocuses as well as most other species.) Along with the familiar Dutch varieties include some of the smaller but even more winsome species and species hybrids that are listed by bulb specialists. Crocuses are useful under trees, at the edge of the lawn, to trim bulb beds and in the rock garden.

2. Snowflakes are often listed in two species, Leucojum vernum and L. aestivum, but most of those you buy under either name are likely to be the latter. Both species are essentially "naturalizing" bulbs. That is, they are best left to settle down in casual or random groupings with and among other spring-flowering bulbs, in rock gardens and among other lowgrowing springtime plants. The comes with the main rush of spring bloom.

3. Spanish bluebell is, technically, Scilla hispanica, but is more often listed in catalogues as S. campanulata, sometimes simply as wood hyacinth. It flowers late, after almost all other spring bulbs are finished and at about the same time as the very latest hybrid garden tulips. Ordinary bulbs may produce 24-inch flower spikes. Top-quality strains may reach almost 30 inches. They are among the loveliest and most durable flowers of the shady, late-spring woodland.

4. Grape hyacinth is one of the very few bulbs that self-sow in ordinary temperate-zone gardens. Species and varieties vary somewhat, but chief differences from garden to garden are in color (there are white ones as well as the ubiquitous blue). They are low growing, but make a pleasant show in an expanse of evergreen ground cover such as creeping myrtle (Vinca minor).

5. Snowdrops are snowdrops. Everybody knows them. Everybody should plant a quart or so in the spring garden wherever cro-cuses will grow. The variety Elwesi is a preferred form, but all are pretty.

6. Crown imperial is the giant of the fritillaria genus, but for all its spectacular effect it is little grown in this country. It is perfectly hardy, reaches 3-foot height under ordinary conditions (though it may achieve 4 feet), has red or yellow flowers (the yellow is harder to get and far better), and exudes at times a fetid odor that may (bad) bother some people and (good) discourage rodents. This plant responds well to full sunlight.

7. The more common fritillary (F. meleagris) is a splendid plant for light woodlands. Rising a foot or so, it makes a respectable show among ground-cover plants and its duck-egg-size blossoms are a happy change from most of the flowers that grow from bulbs.

8. Say scilla and you mean the blue Siberian squill. It is as inevitable and as easy to growjust as lovely, too-as the snowdrop, to name one. Buy scillas by the hundred and sow them lavishly wherever early blue is wanted. Spring Beauty, listed by most dealers, is the best variety.

9. Puschkinia scilloides is a 4-inch plant with a 3-fathom name. Few gardeners know it; but those who know it, grow it. Be sure to give it a location, either in a rock garden or elsewhere, that will permit it to be seen-among dry leaves under a birch tree or a still-leafless bush, for example.

10. Winter aconite (Eranthis hyemalis) grows even closer to the ground than puschkinia. It is also harder to establish: If you can get five bulbs out of twentyfive to think well enough of your garden to come up the spring after planting, you will be doing fine. After the first successful season or two, these low-growing but spectacular golden flowers will increase slowly but steadily from year to year.

11. The crested iris rises from a rhizomatous rather than bulbous root. But it behaves like most very early spring bulbs and grows well in bulb plantings and among rocks. It will also bloom freely in shady woods, where its foliage relishes a long, cool, preferably moist, summer. It flowers in April, in shades of blue and white. Curiously enough, it may not prove hardy in the South.

12. Glory-of-the-snow is a silly name, but so is chionodoxa. The plant is simple and unassuming. It belongs in the springtime progression with the rest. It is one of the early flowers, but like the others is so markedly influenced by its location (with relation to cold winds, warm sun, warm house walls, light or heavy soil, sun and shade) that early is as early does. Like many others, it is also prettiest and most valuable after a season or two, when it has begun to multiply and spread.

13. Narcissus scaberulus is a purely capricious choice for the last plant of our dozen. It is a daffodil, of course, but one of the very smallest. It is as hardy as the rocks among which it is most pleasantly visible in the garden. And it is but one among a small select group of true miniatures.

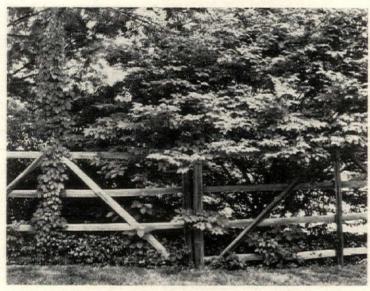

What of the other daffodils, as well as the tulips and hyacinths? Aren't they "basic"? The answer here and today is, no. They are the show flowers of all our springs. Their variety is boundless and their varieties legion. But they are not bread-and-butter bulbs like those we have been talking about. The minute you begin to take the big daffodils and tulips for granted, you begin to diminish your garden. Our dozen should be taken for granted. That's when they are at their best.

THE TOOLS AND TACTICS OF PRUNING

Regular pruning ensures proper plant development

Uncontrolled growth even of the best of trees and shrubs often causes individual plants to lose the clearly defined character for which you selected them in the first place. This winged euonymus variety crowds through fence, obscures plants beyond.

Careful pruning is desirable not only to guarantee the health of the shrub but to maintain the self-respect of the pruner. There is seldom justification for bad technique. Here clean, close basal cut is made from below with curved, reverse-tooth saw.

Effect of pruning is not only that the vase-like form characteristic of this euonymus variety (E. alatus compactus) has been restored but additional light and growing room have been provided for spring bulbs beneath and for other shrubs in background.

and your large ornamental shrubs show the most obvious need for shears or a saw. Storm-broken branches and overgrown or overcrowding shrubs easily become an affront to the most casual eye. Almost any able-bodied person can take care of the routine clean-up pruning that can be done on the ground. A stepladder is not too much of a problem for the majority of us. But real tree work should be left for people who are at ease on high ladders-there is no point in pretending to be a hero. All the projects illustrated on these pages were carried out by a home gardener standing either with both feet on the ground or on a household stepladder. All were done to remove dead and unwanted growth, or to make ordinary landscape plants look better than they would without pruning care. The pictures and captions best tell the story. But pictures aside, there are certain general points about pruning that are worth discussing. They can be summarized in four short paragraphs as follows:

1. The time to prune. Just before growth begins in late winter or very early spring, all trees and shrubs are more or less dormant, and many are leafless. Storm damage and other malformations are easily spotted at that time. Pruning done then will be immediately followed by resurgent seasonal growth. The pruned tree or shrub generally tends to develop new shoots just behind the point where cuts were made. Pruning done during or toward the end of the active growing season usually does not promote the same kind of new growth (it may simply check or retard the over-all growth). However, every cut has its ultimate effeet, and heavy pruning at whatever season will induce a compensating effort on the part of the cut plant to offset the effect of the cut with some kind of new development. So think before you prune.

2. Why prune? While you should avoid pruning without reason, you need never hesitate to prune for cause. Among the good reasons for pruning: to remove low tree branches; to thin tree branches for less shade or improved form; to shorten branches or twigs for more compact growth or increased flower production; to thin out tangled or overgrown shrubs at ground level, eliminating dead wood and improving form; to trim or shear hedges and individual plants for special effects (including topiary); to remove dead or damaged growth to preserve or improve the health and vigor of the original plant. In other words—there is no limit to what you may prune if you have an objective that justifies the effort you will be required to make.

3. How to prune. The accompanying photographs illustrate not only several basic manipulations involved in pruning, but the tools themselves. Additional pruning advice: Buy only firstquality tools. Keep tools sharp. Never, but never, make a careless or random cut. Dress all pruning wounds that are larger than a halfdollar with a tree-wound preparation in liquid or aerosol form. Oil both the blades and, as needed, the bearings of all cutting tools. Never stand on dead tree limbs. Don't stand on shaky or insecure supports while pruning. Don't step on a ladder rung that isn't there. Burn pruned growth that you know is diseased. Disinfect pruning tools after use on any of your plants that you feel sure are dangerously diseased.

4. How to master the finer points of pruning. Before you commit yourself to a pruning operation you really don't know how to execute, either consult someone who is patently familiar with the operation or turn to a good book on pruning. Pruning is a big subject, and while facility comes with experience, basic knowledge can be obtained from the printed word. Three pruning books are worth mentioning here. Most concise but perhaps most cursory of the manuals directed to the home gardener is Edwin Steffek's Pruning Made Easy (Holt, $2.95). For both the tyro and the accomplished gardener in need of specialized information, the two most complete general guides are Montague Free's Plant Pruning in Pictures (Doubleday, $4.95) and Everett P. Christopher's The Pruning Manual (Macmillan, $5). The former has several hundred photographs and drawings with brief but authoritative text. Everything Mr. Free talks about or illustrates he has done with his own hands or evaluated from his own vast knowledge. Mr. Christopher's book is a current revision of the late L. H. Bailey's standard work of sixty years ago. It is far and away the most explicit general guide available. If this book cannot tell you what you need to know, then call in a professional.
